City Council Calls Public Hearing On Bus Transportation Applications

PACIFIC ELECTRIC AND VERDUGO HILLS COMPANY SEEK OPERATING PERMIT

Both Concerns Outline Plans and Officials Decide to Consider Projects at Meeting Next Tuesday Night at City Hall

BUS transportation within the city of Glendale will be the subject of a public hearing commencing at 7 o'clock Tuesday night in the council chamber at the city hall according to a decision reached last night by the City Council. Applications from both the Pacific Electric Railway Company and the Verdugo Hills Transportation Company for the operation of bus lines were received yesterday in the city clerk's office. According to ordinance, they were referred to the police department for investigation. It was decided to refer them to the committee of the whole also.

A suggestion that all persons interested in bus transportation should be permitted and invited to present their views to the City Council was made by Councilman C. E. Kimlin. He expressed his opinion that the subject is one of great importance to the future prosperity of Glendale. The council took the attitude that a solution of the problem should be reached without further delay.

P. E. Application

The Pacific Electric's application, which was signed by O. A. Smith, passenger traffic manager, is as follows:

"The Pacific Electric Railway company hereby makes application to operate motor bus service within the city of Glendale in accordance with map attached hereto and made part of application, also in accordance with memoranda attached hereto pertaining to fares, service, etcetera.

"If application is granted, it is our understanding that minor changes in bus routes may be made at any time desired by and agreed to by your city. We will also comply with ordinances and regulations of your city governing the operation of such busses."

Proposes Three Routes

Three routes are specified in the map presented by the Pacific Electric. These are as follows:

No. 1—From Broadway south on Pacific avenue and San Fernando road to Cypress street, to Glendale avenue, to Palmer avenue, to Adams St., to Broadway, to Verdugo road, to Maple street, to Glendale avenue. The route is then retraced to its starting point.

No. 2—From Alameda street on Kenneth road to Pacific avenue, to Doran St., to Columbus avenue, to Myrtle street, to Central avenue, to California avenue, to Brand boulevard, to Broadway, to Verdugo road.

No. 3—From San Fernando road on Doran street to Chester street, to Salem street, to Columbus avenue, to Wilson avenue, to Central avenue, to Broadway, to Jackson street, to Doran street, to Isabel street, to Lexington drive, to Jackson street, and then back over the same route.

Plan of Service

Service will consist of a thirty-minute schedule on all routes with a promise of operating additional service as necessary. The school children's fare would be half of the regular fare through the purchase of forty tickets at a time.

Local fares in Glendale generally will be 6 cents. Ten tickets will be sold for 50 cents. These will be interchangeable and will be good for any time without limit. They will be accepted on local street cars.

The 6-cent fare limit or the 5-cent ticket limit on route No. 2, the Pacitic avenue and Kenneth road line, will be the crossing of the Pacific Electric line to Burbank. Beyond that point the fare will be 10 cents.

Free transfers will be issued between busses, and also between street cars and busses, within the 6-cent fare limits of Glendale. Free transfers will be issued to and from Los Angeles trains to points corresponding to fare limit points on rail lines.

Needs Six Busses

"We are now operating three busses in Glendale," stated Mr. Smith. "The proposed operation will require six busses. Additional busses will be required after service is increased from time to time, which will be provided as the necessity arises.

"It is proposed to extend Route No. 2 from Grand View and Kenneth roads via Grand View avenue and Tenth street to the city limits of Glendale when the territory is sufficiently developed to warrant such operation.

"It is proposed to extend Route No. 3 from Jackson and Doran

DEMANDS ON CHINA FOR OUTRAGE

Foreign Diplomats Hand Note to Government Over Banditry

PEKING, Aug. 10.—The note completed by the foreign diplomats' body after the investigation of the Luncheon outrage was handed to Foreign Minister Wellington Koo today. The document is very long and is divided into three parts:

First—Indemnities for damages to foreign captives; these indemnities to be gradually increased after the time of captivity.

Second—Guaranties: The Chinese government is invited to take strong action against banditry in the central and northern provinces and in assistance of foreign military attaches of the foreign body. The Boxer treaty is referred to in this clause.

Third—Punishment and summary dismissal of the Shantung military governor and three other high officers.

Face Exclusion

The foreign group, composing the note, will, if necessary, send their own investigating committee. Offenders will in the future be excluded from treaty ports where foreigners hold concessions.

The body further requested the formation of a special force of railway police under the command of foreign officers. The latter, however, is not yet completed, it was announced.

An annex to the document contains a general warning against the chaotic state of affairs, requesting a thorough cleaning out of the administration.

Mrs. Harding Aids in Comforting Relatives

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Harding was greatly touched by the outpouring of friendship that has come from every side in Marion and she has ordered that people be allowed to pass until the very last minute. So long was the line in early morning it was clearly apparent to Mrs. Harding and other members of the family that it would be impossible for all of them to pass in the four hours. Consequently at Mrs. Harding's orders the heavy cover of the casket was raised a few minutes before 8 o'clock instead of at 9 as had been planned and the first of those who had stood for many weary hours passed through the little sitting room of the Harding home and looked for the last time on the features of the dead president.

As the unending stream of people and flowers poured in and out of the little house, Mrs. Harding rested quietly in the upstairs part of the home with other relatives. She was said to be bearing up in her usual gritty manner, as the time approached for the burial and was even comforting other immediate relatives of the family. Dr. Harding, the late president's aged father, was nervous and ill at ease. He wandered about the house and frequently he broke into tears.

Kills Wife, Himself As 'Public Benefactor'

ALTA, Iowa, Aug. 10.—After a month's absence, M. O. Mikkelson, 50, returned to his home here last night and shot and killed his wife, then committed suicide. The crazed husband wrote five notes after killing his wife, one of which was addressed to "The Public" which stated he had a "public duty" and was a "public benefactor." The couple leave five children.

Convicts In State Prison Pay Tribute To Harding

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. Aug. 10.—Tribute was paid today to the late Warren G. Harding by convicts of the state prison here. Rev. Father J. Spencer Burton of San Francisco officiating. Services were held in the penitentiary chapel. Following Father Burton's address a rendition of "Nearer, My God, to Thee" was given by the prison band and choir. The service opened with "Lead, Kindly Light," one of the president's favorite hymns. The benediction and taps by a bugler of the band followed the hymns.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10.—A gray, leaden sky here added the final touch to the greatest outpouring of grief this city has ever extended a fallen leader. With all factories and business houses closed during the national period of mourning and the majority of them shut down all day, tens of thousands of reverent citizens of this city where President Harding breathed his last, gathered in monster tribute of sorrow in the spacious civic auditorium.

Services at this meeting commenced at noon when an hour of sacred music was played. Long before the organ began to tremble with the reverent cadence of the "Star Spangled Banner," the structure was packed solid with sorrowing thousands. As the prayers of the clergy were recited, open sobs that sounded strangely in an unnaturally quiet city could be heard. The little children took a large part in the services at the various churches. "Lead, Kindly Light" and other favorite hymns of the departed leader were sung and appropriate quotations from his writings were recited in each class room.

The same tribute of deep silence which greeted the removal of the flag-draped casket from the hotel at the beginning of the long overland journey was everywhere.

Editor Harding's 'Boys' In Final Homage To Chief

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 10.—None of all those who passed by Warren G. Harding's bier today for a last look at the peaceful features that seemed to smile in death felt a deeper sense of loss than did the men who had been associated with him for years in his work as editor and publisher of The Marion Star, for Editor Warren G. Harding bound his men to him with a loyalty that nothing could shake.

There were men from the office of the Star who had gone through the lean years with him when he was trying to put the decrepit paper on its feet, men who had loaned him money to buy his paper, men who had left their "time" lie until he could raise the money to pay them, and through it all they had stood by Harding and the Star with a loyalty that the dead president never wearied of praising.

The "Marion Star boys" went through at 8 a. m. "Boys" they were still to the mourning widow, even though many of them had hair that had grown white in the upbuilding of the Star.

There was "Bill" Bull. He had been a printers' devil when Warren Harding was editor. Now he is foreman of the Star's composing room.

There was Lew Miller, for thirty-seven years in the employ of the Star, and Tommy Mahr, for twenty years on the paper. They knew him long years before any one—even himself, perhaps—had dreamed that he was a man of destiny and bound for the White House.

It was a sorrowful pilgrimage, this pilgrimage of the boys of the Star, and there was not a dry eye among them when they finally emerged from the simple little sitting room.

HUGE CROWD FLOCKS TO MARION

Population of Town Is Practically Doubled by Incoming People

MARION, Aug. 10.—What disposition to make of the perspiring throngs attending the final services for Warren G. Harding today was a problem for those in charge of arrangements. At 8 o'clock this morning there was a line of waiting people extending for ten blocks, all anxious to see the face of the dead president. People in some instances stood seven and eight abreast.

Incoming trains were bringing in new hundreds and new thousands to swell the crowd, and at noon it was estimated that more than 50,000 people had come in to this town to almost double its population. The late arrivals simply joined on at the rear end of the line. Hotels are crowded and unable to care for the visitors.

Troops On Duty

Near the Harding home the street was kept clear by national guardsmen. Only cars bringing distinguished guests or officers or accredited newspaper men were permitted to go through.

Meanwhile, the tiny yard of the home was choked with a multitude of floral offerings that early outgrew the dimensions of the Harding property and lapped over into adjoining yards.

COOLIDGE AT MARION

MARION, O., Aug. 10.—President Coolidge arrived at the Harding residence at 1:47 p. m. In the cars following were Chief Justice Taft and other dignitaries who accompanied the president on his train.

Ford, Firestone And Edison At Harding Burial

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 10.—Not only Ohioans were represented among the myriad of friends of Warren Harding in Marion today. Those who came to bid him hail and farewell came from many places. Among them was Henry Ford, whose political possibilities as president have been much discussed of late. Mr. Ford and President Harding were warm personal friends. There was Thomas A. Edison, the aged inventor, and Harry Firestone, the tire manufacturer. They had gone camping together for years. John Burroughs, the venerable and delightful naturalist, who was also one of the annual campers, has already gone to his long sleep.

By 11:30 o'clock the line of people down Center street, from the home where the body lay, had grown to such enormous proportions that it became apparent that all of them could not pass through the little sitting-room in the Harding home before the appointed hour for closing the casket. The station and the Harding home are approximately a mile apart, both on Center street, and at 11:30 o'clock, the line extended clear from the home to the station with the people packed six and seven abreast in a perspiring line.

PUT GUARD ON HARDING'S REMAINS

Detachment of Troops to Prevent Any Attempt At Vandalism

MARION, Aug. 10.—Soldiers will prevent souvenir hunters and other vandals from disturbing the last sleep of Warren G. Harding, twenty-ninth president of the United States.

A detachment of regular army troops will guard the remains for six months, as required by law, and perhaps longer, it was made known here today.

The smoke from an army field kitchen was wafted this morning through the Marion cemetery—the cemetery that W. G. Harding, county newspaper publisher, helped to build and where he now lies in his final rest.

The kitchen was for the troops sent here in connection with the funeral and for the guard about "W. G.'s" resting place.

In the case of President McKinley, the troops were on duty about his tomb for nearly two years to prevent vandals from disturbing the sleep of the dead.

President Coolidge in Marion for Ceremonies

MARION, O., Aug. 10.—Silent and mournful, the nation's highest today reached the little Ohio town that gave America its twenty-ninth president, the home town where he is being laid to his final rest.

Bowed with grief, akin to the whole nation, President Coolidge and his little band of mourners, representing the highest positions of the government, stepped from the train at Marion at 1:30 p. m. Central Standard time, to trace the last sad steps behind the body of their beloved friend and chief.

Three times before, when the nation's capital honored the dead president Mr. Coolidge followed slowly in their wake.

Marion, mourning the last over her distinguished son, paused momentarily to welcome Calvin Coolidge, the new president of the Republic by virtue of the tragic death of Warren G. Harding.

From early dawn the people of the state that sent the late president to the White House were lined along the pathway of the caravan of sorrow, waiting to welcome the man who had supplanted their illustrious son. Thousands were at the little stations and towns through which the presidential special crawled. There were no ovations, nothing but respectful silence befitting the nature of the executive's errand.

Immediately following the interment, President Calvin Coolidge and his party will return to Washington, leaving Marion at 6 p. m. Eastern Standard time.

PLAIN PEOPLE OF MARION GIVE LAST REVERENCE FOR DEAD

Friends and Neighbors in Solemn Services for Beloved Citizen

By GEO. R. HOLMES
For International News Service

MARION, O., Aug. 10.—In a little vine covered vault, set like a green jewel among the white headstones that mark the earthly beds of his old friends, Warren Harding was laid to rest this afternoon.

In a stone's throw of his shady resting place by the grave of his mother and his sister and all around him sleeping the friends and neighbors of the small town from which he sprang to world eminence. Many of those who surround him in his final sleep he helped to bury. He wrote their obituaries and the stories of their funerals in the days when he was the struggling young editor of a none too stable country newspaper.

The group that brought him to the tomb were as unonstentatious and simple as his kindly heart would have wished. Only the bombing of the presidential salute of twenty-one guns in the distance, only the great crowd that eddied and moved restlessly about the cemetery, only the presence of an unusual number of men in high silk hats and funereal looking clothes, only the countless bowed heads and tearful faces, marked this funeral as different from the myriads of others that he himself attended in the same sunlit cemetery.

Just Private Citizen

He was buried in the role that he loved best—as a private citizen mourned by the friends and neighbors of a life time. Throughout the day a strange, unreal day for the little town he helped to build, these same friends and neighbors had passed by his bier in an endless line and mourned sincerely for his going.

The great and the small of the nation were there, gathered in a great semi-circle all around the vault that is to hold all that is earthly of him.

The new president of the United States was there, cabinet members, supreme court justices, senators and representatives, and they rubbed elbows under the leveling influence of death, with those of Warren Harding's friends whose clothing and appearances denoted a life of toil and not much pecuniary success. They gathered there together in a mutuality of reverence and sorrow over the passing of one whose highest professed ambition in life had been to be a good friend and a good neighbor, and who bore the reputation in his home town of having attained his ambition.

Sun Comes Forth

The late summer sun which had struggled against clouds throughout the day, was still high in the heavens when the noiseless grey hearse slid gently into the trim burying ground—a plot as neat as Warren G. Harding used to love to keep his desk. It moved slowly around through the winding graveled path to where soldiers kept back a great and reverential throng, some distance back from the vine covered mound.

Behind it came the sorrowful mourners of the dead, half a hundred cars of them, relatives, friends, the president, generals of the army, admirals of the navy, respelendent in their white uniforms with burnished gold.

The mountain party given last night under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First Methodist church proved a most enjoyable affair. About thirty members and their friends gathered at the church at 7:30 o'clock and all motored to the Arroyo Seco, where they built two huge bonfires just below Camp Oak Wild. "Hot dogs," marshmallows, cookies and all that go to make a weiner bake and mountain party a success were available.

THEATRES

THE GLENDALE

"The Man from Glengarry" shows for the last times today at the Glendale Theatre. This massive Hodkinson picture, from the celebrated novel by Ralph Connor, was directed by Henry McRae, himself a Glengarry lumberman's son, and is a vivid, realistic, dramatic study of the great Canadian north woods.

Lovers of the outdoors will welcome "The Man from Glengarry" for its pervading spirit of the beauty and majesty of nature, and for its intensely dramatic story, set against a background of giant trees, primitive men and primitive life.

To see this great production carries you away. It is like a vacation. You leave it at the end, exhilarated, returning to your home as from an outing in the mountains.

THE GATEWAY

Just as he wrote it, so is it screened—Booth Tarkington's "Penrod and Sam," the sequel to "Penrod." The kids in the notable cast include Benny Alexander, Joe Butterworth, Buddy Messinger, Newton Hall and Gertrude Messinger, and the grown-ups include Rockliffe Fellows, Gladys Brockwell, William V. Mong, Mary Philbin and Gareth Hughes.

William Beaudine directed the feature, which is as authentic a register of boy life as ever has reached the screen, and as amusing. Old and young alike will enjoy this picture.

"Penrod and Sam" is a First National production, presented by J. K. McDonald. Every facility of a great organization has been focused on making this one of the best attractions of the year, which it most certainly is.

DIRECTOR NAMED TO HEAD SCOUTS

Second Troop Is Organized Under Guardianship of Community Church

F. M. Gilmore will direct the destinies of Boy Scouts Troop No. 2 of Tujunga that is being formed under the guardianship of the Men's Brotherhood of the Community church. This was the principal item of business for which the Brotherhood held a meeting in the church, after voting at a previous meeting to take the new troop under its guardianship.

Organization of a second troop was begun in the spring after the original troop had filled and passed its quota of members and had a long waiting list of applications.

Wright and O'Rourke have dropped the case they have been prosecuting against the Haines Canyon Water Company, and the State Railroad Commission has vacated the order directing the water company to serve the Wright and O'Rourke lands, regardless of the fact that these lands were outside the territory the water company had elected to serve.

Will Furnish Water

The right of the commission to order this extension of service was the principle involved in the case and the water company appealed from this order. As a result of the land owners' action in dismissing the case the water company has dismissed its appeal and entered into an agreement with the subdividers to furnish water to the tract, known as the Gem of Tujunga tract.

The subdividers had started a well on the tract and were determined that their buyers should have water, but the peaceful ending of the controversy makes the development unnecessary. The water company has promised water to the owners in the new tract in a few days and will complete the laying of service mains to this end.

Want More Lights

Requests totaling nearly fifty have been filed with J. O'B. Bodkin of the chamber of commerce street lighting committee for additional lights in the Tujunga district.

Hillhaven, the fast developing suburb of Tujunga proper, is anxious to be taken into the district. L. S. Benjamin has been active for some time in this movement.

Professor Schneider, real estate broker and instructor in the University of Southern California, recently addressed members of the Tujunga Valley Realty Board at a dinner at Gilmore's on the new state laws affecting the real estate business. Incidental business of the meeting was the proper disposal of a chicken dinner, which was accomplished with neatness and dispatch, in the order named.

A "made to order" furniture store has been opened at 348 South Sunset boulevard by I. H. Hubbell, formerly of Los Angeles. His specialty is making special pieces of furniture to order to fit some odd corner of the house. Sash and door frames and repair work will be done also.

Car Is Damaged

A car bearing a registration certificate made out to R. B. Parker, 991 East 33rd street, Los Angeles, was slightly damaged when it narrowly missed a car owned by Mr. Guizell of the Day and Night garage and careened into the brush at the side of the street. The accident happened on El Centro street. The driver and occupants left the machine, but some time during the night it was removed.

What appears to be a campaign to eliminate some of the dangerous fast driving on Michigan avenue and other Tujunga streets was begun with the arrest of I. W. Feax of Long Beach by a county motorcycle officer. He was charged with a speed of fifty-five miles per hour.

The T. N. T. club held the monthly meeting and dinner at the home of Robert Smellie on Tuesday evening.

Rev. Glenn Moore will take for the subject of morning sermon next Sunday "The Beloved Disciple's Love." The evening theme will be "Bankruptcy."

The Ladies' Aid Society is planning a series of entertainments.

DEMAND REFUGES FROM AIR RAIDS

Shelters From Foes in Event Of Warfare Sought by British Public

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Public demand is growing here that the British government, in addition to the establishment of a greater air force, consider also the advisability of providing great public air raid shelters in view of possible aerial attack in the next war.

It is argued that however strong the country's air defenses may be, there is the possibility that at certain points they will be broken, and that big towns, London in particular, will be bombed with terrible severity.

These shelters, it is contended, should not only be bomb-proof, as they were in the world war, but also gas-proof, for it is pointed out that poison gas will be an important factor in aerial raids in the next war.

Ideal Shelter

An ideal shelter, it is thought by experts, would be one that embodied the dugout of the world war and the invulnerability of the battleship, with ample provision for the speedy ingress and exit of a panicky public.

A London newspaper, discussing this subject—which, it is asserted, is engaging the attention of the authorities—declares that without wishing unduly to alarm it may well be that in the next war all the daily work that is necessary to carry on the economic life of the nation may have to be carried on under shelter from air attacks. Therefore, it adds, let the government get to work and construct air raid shelters before it is too late, for should enemy airplanes break through, as they are almost certain to, more damage will be done in a few hours by one raid than was done by all the raids in the world war.

Manicure Girls Fight Uniform Dress Plan

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—Jersey City may issue an edict compelling manicures to wear long sleeves and wash their faces instead of using powder, but the manicures of Boston will have none of it.

"Laws or no laws, we will dress as we please in Boston, and will put on all the sweet smelling powder we wish," is the general summary of the manicure ladies questioned on the subject here.

"There is no reason why we should wear uniforms and look pallid and act like Pilgrim maidens," said one manicure. "We will not steal any husbands. Most men when they want treatment for beauty go to the barber shop. That is the place for them, anyway. If there is any move here to follow in the footsteps of Jersey City there will be a concerted howl and many violators."

Hottest furnaces in the world are those of electricity at Niagara Falls, their temperature being 7000 degrees, or more than twice the heat of boiling steel.

COUNT IS BROKE BUT WON'T WORK

Scion of Russ Nobility Is Down to Park Bench But Retains His Style

By ROLAND KREBS
For International News Service

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Count Leo Istilio Ramloff hasn't a dime in his pockets and he's growing frightfully baggy about the knees, but by the gods! he's still monarch of all he surveys.

He surveys quite a bit from his bench in Grant park, and he does it with the aplomb and complacence that seems to go with noble birth. The count is just a "hobo," but a very shrewd one.

Takes Awful Drop

Ramloff was born of the Russian nobility, and before the count industry took an awful "flop" wasn't such very small potatoes about Warsaw, where his estates were extensive. There he used to dream of the days when his ancestors rode with falcons on their wrists and held their noses when the canaille approached.

He liked cigarettes and his blended tobacco came from Herzegovina, where about the mildest and most delightful leaves in Europe are grown. When the count said: "Have a cigarette," it was a treat to the person to whom it was offered.

The war swallowed up his home, his wealth, his security and the glory that was the Ramloffs' for centuries. He came to America. He tried several jobs, but they didn't agree with him. He has found being idle much more pleasant.

Will Not Work

"I will not work at anything," Count Leo Istilio Ramloff explained, stretching his slender legs before his park bench. "I need the position of a gentleman. I was one in Europe and I am one now.

"Hardships? What are hardships? I am content."

His thin fingers felt in the pockets of his shabby coat. He extracted a sack of the "makin's." It smelt of Kansas hay more than of the deliciously-tart leaves of Herzegovina. With a dexterity acquired with hardship, he fashioned a skinny cigarette that was a poor substitute for the long, narrow kind he smoked formerly.

A cloud of smoke emerged from his mouth. With a quick intake of breath he sucked it back and down into his lungs. You should have seen it! The movement had in it all the grace of an aristocrat.

The count hasn't a job. He hasn't a dime. He's a "hobo." But, by the gods! he's a Count.

And don't you think anything else.

Hair Net Industry Is Wrecked by Flappers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The "pigtail" hair net industry of China has gone to "pot" because of the whims and caprices of the American flapper, Consul Lupton, at Chefoo, reported to the Department of Commerce recently. The flapper just won't wear 'em and the industry has practically collapsed.

Last year the single strand nets were in vogue, but the flapper has now ruled them "passe." As a result the industry and importers are glutted with singles for which there is no market. Attempts to palm them off on the trade at prices below cost is not meeting with much success, the Department stated.

START CAMPAIGN FOR CLEAN LAKE

Prosecutions Promised for Motor Boat Owners Who Pollute Beaches

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Yacht and motor boat owners who persist in contaminating the waters of Lake Michigan with refuse from their crafts near bathing beaches of Chicago will be vigorously prosecuted.

This was the warning sounded by Health Commissioner Bundesen as he explained the procedure the city is taking to make the lake safe for Chicagoans this summer.

"Quite a few of these yachts and motor boats hang around the beaches, their skippers and crews intent on enticing bathing girls," the commissioner explained. "Refuse, especially from the larger boats, is emptied into the lake, regardless of location, thus contaminating the waters until they are unsafe—and often dangerous—for bathers.

"A rigid patrol of the beaches will be instituted soon, and all such craft will be seized and their owners arrested. It is my intention to stamp out such debasing practices among unscrupulous yacht owners," the commissioner asserted.

Attaches of Commissioner Bunderson's office also announced the health department will spray chlorine over the beach waters to purify them some time in the near future. Motor boats will be used for this purpose, they added. The cost for the remainder of the summer will be in the neighborhood of $5,000, according to estimates.

City Employes Winners In Twilight League

The team representing the City Employes won the championship in the Twilight Baseball league last night when they won the second of the three-game series against the Night School team, with whom they were tied for first place, by scoring 26 runs to the students' 8 tallies, and winning the handsome silver cup that was offered the winers by J. C. Smith, manager of the Standard Oil company.

This marks the close of the first series of games organized by Community Service, and the next schedule to be played is that of the indoor league, which is given in detail in this issue of The Glendale Evening News.

HAS WAY TO PICK HEAD OF SCHOOL

Series of Questions Reveals Qualifications Sought In Superintendent

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 10.—The "secret" is out. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, Washington, D. C., came all the way to Columbus from the nation's capital and told a local audience how to pick a city school superintendent out from a crowd.

Here's how it is done:

Pick on a man whose age appears to be between 37 and 50 years and ask him these questions: "Are you married? Have you from one to three children? Do you belong to three professional organizations? Are you an officer in one? Do you belong to two civic organizations? Are you an officer in one? Do you belong to two fraternal ogranizations? Are you an officer in one? Do you read two daily newspapers, four professional magazines?

If an affirmative answer is given to each of these questions the man is a city school superintendent. Superintendent Ballou said this method of identification was discovered in connection with a recent survey.

HOME-FOLKS IN FINAL HOMAGE

Neighbors Take 'W. G.' to Last Resting Place in Marion Cemetery

President Harding's life and in consonance with the wishes of his bereaved widow. A dozen men and women who had worked for him in happier days marched behind the flag-covered casket and ahead of the high silk-hatted, frock-coated statesmen from Washington. Prominently placed, too, were intimate and old-time friends, and all of those who accompanied the dead president westward on what proved to be a trip of tragedy and of death. There floated out over the bowed heads of the multitude the sweetly solemn strains of Warren Harding's favorite hymn:

"Lead, Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
Lead, Thou, me on.
The night is dark and I am far from home,
Lead, Thou, me on."

It was given by the Trinity Baptist church choir. Many times before he went to Washington to live in the White House, the dead president had heard this same sweetly solemn hymn sung by the same voices in the church he attended here.

Then the resonant voice of the Rev. George M. Landis, the young pastor of his church, came forth intoning the passages of the scriptures that were especially liked by the departed.

"And they shall see His face; and His name shall be in their foreheads—

"And there shall be no night there, and they need no candle, nor the light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light and they reign forever and ever.

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed."

Pathetic Figure

Then the prayer. It was given by the Rev. Dr. Jesse Swank, Methodist pastor of Mrs. Harding's church in Marion. He asked especially that Divine blessing rest upon the aged father of the president and upon his sorrowing widow who listened with bowed head, a pathetic figure in her heavy mourning.

His prayer follows:

"Almight God, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, giver of every good and perfect gift, the father of the light in whom there is no variableness or shadow of turning, we come with confidence to Thee, even in such a time as this, because we know that Thou art not only a God of greatness and of power, but also a God of mercy and love.

"We also thank Thee for our lan and nation for this guiding hand upon it from its creation until this hour. We thank Thee for what this man, our friend and brother, has meant in the progress and development of our nation.

"We feel that he, in imitation of Him whom he called Master and Lord, has laid down his life in the service of his country, and we believe he has received Thy "well done."

"May Thy blessing rest upon him who assumed vast responsibilities of taking the helm and guiding the future of this land of ours. May Thy blessing rest upon our city in this time of our great bereavement.

"Give Thy blessing to the aged father, who offered his own life in the service of his country and now has given this noble man.

Sustain and support him in this great trial and sorrow and guide his feet in the paths of peace until his ways shall end in the land beyond the grave where he can meet again the dear ones he has loved long since and lost a while.

"Bless the other members of the family and may they feel Thee near. May Thy special blessing rest upon Mrs. Harding, the wife of our loved dead, who lives to mourn the loss of this devoted companion, who journeyed with her up the steps of life until they reached the heights together.

"May she now hear Thee say: " 'Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee. Yea, I will uphold thee with the right arm of righteousness.'

2—X

"May she know that the eternal God is her refuge and underneath are the lasting arms. May she know that she is not alone.

"And may her noble example of confidence and trust in God be an inspiration to all those who are called to work with her.

"May the peace of God descend upon all hearts and may we all learn to live not only for ourselves but for each other, and the good we may do and this noble man and woman."

Depart for Cemetery

At the conclusion of the prayer the choir softly broke forth in the sadly beautiful, "Nearer, My God, to Thee, Nearer to Thee."

As the last words of the benediction floated away there was a momentary pause. Then a rustle of moving feet and the circle of sorrowing friends broke up and began to move slowly and quietly to where the waiting carriages would take them out to the trim, green cemetery, and into the world that had changed mightily in the short space of eight days.

On the heels of the departing people came the clang of the great steel doors from the little vault.

"Home is the Sailor, Home
From the Sea,"
"And the hunter home from the Hill."

Long before the hour of the funeral services, part of the gigantic crowd began to mass along the short route that led to the cemetery, and in the grounds thousands congregated on a hill back of the vault. A dozen florists were engaged at noon in banking the side of the hill with hundreds of great floral offerings that came from all parts of the world.

Promptly at 1 o'clock soldiers broke the line in front of the Harding home and orders were issued that no more were to go through. The line at that hour still extended for blocks down Center street, and thousands of people who had stood in line for hours in the hot sun had their long vigil for nothing.

As soon as the last visitors passed through the house was closed and members of the family assembled in the small room for a brief prayer service led by Dr. Walter King, one of the late president's former pastors.

At 1:30 p. m. intimate friends of the Harding family began to assemble at the house. Among the early arrivals was General Charles G. Dawes, former director of the budget and a warm personal friend of the late president.

PRESIDENT'S SON PICKING TOBACCO

Cal, Jr., Lands Job at $3 a Day; Asks Mother to Let Him Stick

By ELEANOR EARLY
Copyright, 1923, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Found! The one person in America who doesn't give a hoot who's president.

A kid who would rather pick tobacco for $3 a day than live in the White House—Calvin Coolidge, Jr.

He wrote his mother yesterday and his scribbled missive, whose contents are revealed exclusively by International News Service today, promises to go down in history as a most extraordinary example of the young man's democracy. It is the first letter Mrs. Coolidge has received from either son since she and the president came to Washington. When they left Plymouth, Vermont, in the cold, grey dawn, young Calvin was rubbing the sleep out of his eyes.

"Good-bye, mother; good-bye pa," he said. And that was all. Now he has written them and his letter contains not a word of congratulation for his father. Not a mention of the great honor that has fallen to the Coolidges. Not a word of jubilant praise or a bit of enthusiasm.

Earns $3 a Day

Cal only tells his mother of his tobacco job, of the "fine people" for whom he is working. He talks of his bicycle and the heat, and the money he's earning—$3 a day.

There are only five words for the president of the republic—"Give my love to Dad."

The great honor accorded his father—no mention in the son's first letter.

Cal's father earns $75,000 a year, plus an extra $25,000 for expenses. But young Cal, a "millionaire" on $18 a week, scorns financial assistance from the president. He doesn't even make a plea for a bigger allowance. It was raining when he wrote so he didn't have to work, he said. On other days he is up at dawn, pedalling away on the bicycle that carries him to work.

From sunrise until dusk he stoops to his task. Then he pedals home to bed.

Goes Job Hunting

"Ed Baker and I took our bicycles," he wrote" and went job-hunting.

They landed with Dickerman & Day in Hatfield, Mass. "They're fine people," Cal tells his mother, "and I like working for them.

"All the boys are at home except Richard Brown, and he's away at summer school." (Richard is the son of the Coolidges' family physician at Northampton). Cal's letter was brief. Perhaps it stopped raining and he had to go back to work. It ended abruptly with this appeal:

"I like the job. I want to stick to it. Please let me stay."

Secretary Davis Pays Respects Aboard Ship

ABOARD THE STEAMSHIP LEVIATHAN IN MID-ATLANTIC, Aug. 10.—(By Radio to International News Service)—"No president of the United States ever assumed office in peace or war with greater responsibilities than did Warren G. Harding," declared Secretary of Labor James J. Davis today at Memorial services on the Leviathan en route to New York from Southampton.

"He assumed leadership of our country at a time when the insidious forces of class leadership and class dominion were seeking a firm hold on American life," Davis continued, "and he met the challenge of the class world with his unswerving loyalty to the common welfare and his unshaken faith in the unity of our common life."

The President, Davis said, sacrificed himself on the altar of service. Often he saw Harding at his office at 8 o'clock in the morning. "The monument of Warren G. Harding is engraved upon the hearts of the American people," he declared.

New Plant Likely Will Not Be Ready; Changes Are Made in Faculty

The High School Board of Trustees last night set September 11 as the date for the opening of Glendale Union High School. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh's son, Frank, has gone to Soldier Summit to take a position with Mr. Racey.

FATHER AND WIFE TRAGIC FIGURES

Dead President's Nearest And Dearest Show Marks Of Bitter Strain

By W. R. UPDEGRAFF
For International News Service

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 10.—An old man and a fast-aging woman, both borne down by overwhelming sorrow, gazed into each other's eyes today—and wondered, perhaps, whose loss was the greater—beloved husband, or cherished son. They were the most tragic figures of all the thousands in Marion today.

Dr. George T. Harding, Sr., 79-year-old father of the nation's dead president, gray and stooped, was a bit bewildered, a bit awed and overcome at being the focal point today of the teary eyes of a multitude who extended silent sympathy.

Florence Kling Harding bears easily her years, capped by the tragic climax of a week of such pain and suffering as would overnight whiten the hair of an ordinary woman.

Maintains Poise

Unyielding, unconquered, she has maintained her high purpose. "I will not break down," till today. What the night or the coming days of unreconciled grief may bring, no one knows.

"God is with her," said a friend today, a woman who went to school with Florence Kling and worked beside Mrs. Warren Harding at church suppers in happy bygone Marion years.

Dr. Sawyer has been for several years Mrs. Harding's physician. That she will come through the heart-piercing experience today with the same spirit of Spartan fortitude that has been shown all along the 3000 miles of throbbing hearts from San Francisco to Washington, and from the capitol back home to Marion, was Dr. Sawyer's belief today.

As to the father: "He's an exceptional man, keenly alive, sharp," persons of Marion will tell you.

Father Hard Hit

"But he is old and this has hit him terribly hard," they will add, with a shake of the head.

But the father of a president of the United States, the first in the nation's history to outlive his son and see him die in the highest office a free people can offer, may hold up a silvered head and straighten bowed shoulders to meet the agonies that death always brings. Dr. Harding has always been an active man, maintaining his practice up to the day of his son's death. But since that tragic night in San Francisco, the door of his office, on the second floor of the Marion Star Building, has been closed.

Warren, his son, has ever been the apple of his eye. When the dead president, as a young man, desired to be a publisher, the father put up the money to see him started, helped finance the Marion Star, and all along life's way, the helping hand of a proud and loving father eased the path. And now the light that was his joy has gone out. The evening of life has turned to ashes of sorrow and pain. It is to the widow and the bereaved father that overflowing hearts in Marion extend silent compassion today.

Face Trying Day

Both Mr. and Mrs. Harding had a restful night, it was said, at the Harding homestead this morning, and both were grimly resolved to go through the trying day without a "break." Mrs. Harding did much to comfort the aged man, and he, in turn comforted her. Mrs. Harding spent the night at the Harding home instead of going to the home of her brother, C. B. Kling, as she had planned.

For a few precious moments, today Mrs. Harding and the aged father were alone with their dead. Their last night had been spent, under the same roof.

"Mrs. Harding spent a good night and is bright this morning," Dr. George T. Harding, Jr., the dead president's brother said. She was awake before eight o'clock, it was stated.

Dr. Harding, Sr., also slept fairly well during the last night his son, in death, was in his house.

This afternoon, for a few minutes, before the cortege left the residence, the members of the immediate family were to be left alone with the body.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 10.—Eddie Hearne, internationally known auto race driver and member of the racing team of R. Hearne stated that racing was his business and he felt impelled to follow it, even if it did result in a separation from his wife.

FILM STAR HURT AS HORSE BOLTS

Mabel Normand Injured as Animal Balks at Dip In Ocean Surf

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—Mabel Normand, film acrtess, is confined in a local hospital suffering from a broken collar bone, nerve shock and a bruised left eye as the result of being thrown from a horse Sunday at Coronano, it was learned here today.

Miss Normand is said to have ridden her mount for several miles along the Coronado beach and to all appearances he was gentle, but when she headed him toward the surf he turned and broke into a run, throwing her to the ground and then tried to paw at her. She escaped the animal's hoofs by rolling over several times until out of his reach. Physicians say it will be several weeks before she recovers.

C. W. KENT BACK FROM TRIP EAST

Returns to Glendale in Advance of Son and His Family

C. W. Kent, with offices at 131 South Brand boulevard has returned to Glendale in advance of Mrs. Kent and his son's family, Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Kent, who are motoring from Meadeville, Pa., to Denver in the new Cadillac motor car which they purchased in the east.

The entire party left here two months ago on an extensive tour, C. W. Kent buying a car in the east to take them to the St. Lawrence river country after a visit in their old home in the Quaker state. He drove 3500 miles over eastern roads.

A visit to the Thousand Islands was the most interesting of the trip, according to Mr. Kent, who left the east twenty years ago to come to Glendale. He states that his son, Roy, will ship his car from Denver, not desiring to make the motor trip across the desert. The rest of the family should be home in two weeks.

Evening News Keeps Vacationists Posted

A letter arrived at The Glendale Evening News office this morning from Mrs. Sarah B. Stewart of 817 North Louise street, who is visiting in Chehalis, Wash., telling of the pleasures she has had in receiving The Glendale Evening News during her visit.

Mrs. Stewart and her son, Charles, left July 4 for a motor trip north, going to Washington to visit relatives and friends and attend to business affairs. They expect to return home the first of September.

Mrs. Stewart says in her letter: "I want to tell you how I have enjoyed keeping in touch with the news of the home town through the columns of The Glendale Evening News. I have had a chance to show these slow towns the items of our growth and the amount of the building permits. Many say they are coming as soon as they can sell here."

Demands Refund on Light Balance Fund

The City Council last night received a communication from L. Roy Johnston of 1133 South San Fernando road as follows, but deferred action:

"I hereby respectfully demand a refund of my pro rata share of the unexpended balance remaining in the fund for the installation of the ornamental lighting system on San Fernando road between Los Feliz road and the westerly line of Pacific avenue."

DORAN STREET DISTRICT

The names of property owners in the Doran street assessment district is desired by the city council. Councilman Sam Davis last night introduced a motion instructing City Engineer Ben F. FILM STAR AND MOTHER TO MEET

Mary Miles Minter Will Call At Hospital to See Parent

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—With the possibility of a reconciliation as far distant as ever between Mary Miles Minter, film star, and her estranged mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, the pretty actress, despite this, expected to visit her mother today at a local hospital where she is reported seriously ill.

Miss Minter repeated again today her intention of filing suit against her mother and sister, Margaret Shelby, for return of $1,000,000 which she claims is rightfully hers. Miss Shelby denied it was a difference over money matters that estranged her mother and sister.

"Mother has made up her mind about me," Miss Minter said. "If I go to see her, as I probably will, there will be no reconciliation."

Glad to See Her

On the other hand, Mrs. Shelby issued a statement from her sick room stating that no matter what her actress daughter has to say, she will be glad to see her.

What will occur at the meeting between her and her parent who have been at outs since Miss Minter became of legal age, was a matter of much conjecture today. Miss Minter has stated that she did believe that her mother was seriously ill as she had been in touch with the attaches at the hospital where she was operated upon three days ago.

A request for the improvement of Fairmont avenue was referred to City Engineer Ben F. Dupuy last night by the City Council.

A communication from J. B. Burn of 567 Patterson avenue was as follows: "I respectfully request that Fairmont avenue west of Concord street be graded and paved with three-inch oil macadam and have the necessary curbs, sidewalks and water pipe constructed thereon. My frontage on this street is 50 per cent of the total. All assessments of over $25 to go to ten year bonds if desired."

Two Pictures Of Late Teddy Roosevelt? Oh, No! One's Of Senator-Elect Johnson

The striking resemblance of Magnus Johnson, senator-elect from Minnesota, to the late ex-President Teddy Roosevelt is brought out by these photos. Were Teddy to don his campaign hat, the resemblance would be more startling. Johnson also assumes many Rooseveltian poses.

Missourians Come for Visit With Relatives

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Moren of Laredo, Mo., arrived in Glendale yesterday to visit with their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. Weidman of 119 North Kenwood street.

They motored through by the way of Denver, Salt Lake, Lake Tahoe, Sacramento and Tulare. Of all the California cities visited they like Glendale best, and it is needless to say that Glendale will claim them as her own before long.

Miss Garton Appointed Secretary of Society

Miss Lulu E. Garton of 402 East Harvard street has been appointed corresponding secretary of the California Women's Missionary Society of the Christian Church. "Bananas" Cause Of Pistol Shot At Phonograph

SEATTLE, Aug. 10.—Detective William Peterson, detailed to investigate a reported shooting in the street in front of the Pantages Building, submitted the following report:

"Shot fired through phonograph standing in entrance to store. Bullet lodged in post behind phonograph. By course of ball, it was apparently fired from an office in the Pantages Building. No tenant in the building could be found who would admit knowing anything of the shooting.

"A dentist said a whole day of 'Yes, we have no bananas' had spoiled his dinner,—but the shot was fired before dinner."

DEVELOPMENT IN NORTH IS SHOWN

S. S. Gilhuly Returns From Sacramento Valley Trip Confirmed Booster

S. S. Gilhuly of 342 El Bonito avenue, who is associated with G. O. Russell of 900 Orange Grove avenue in the real estate business at 212 South Brand boulevard, returned yesterday from a business trip to the Sacramento valley.

"Great things are being done in the Sacramento valley," Mr. Gilhuly said, "and the evidences of progress, the reflection of agricultural development and industrial expansion are to be seen on every hand.

"I spent one whole day in the great Sutter Basin project, where 4000 acres of the richest kind of river bottom land has been reclaimed by drainage and is now being cropped, every acre of it, and planted out in trees and vines.

"Crops are immense. This river bottom land is certainly as good as any, if not the best, soil in California. J. Ogden Armour has put something like $10,000,000 into this project. The entire piece of 45,000 acres is under cultivation.

Building Booming

"The city of Sacramento is already beginning to show the reflex of this great development project in a building boom that is almost a rival of Glendale's growth, both in the business and the residential sections. Other cities of the Sacramento valley are also showing it. New towns are being projected. On the Sutter Basin company's project there is a railway line already built, eighteen miles long, and already three new towns have been planned along this line. Concrete highways are being built, miles of them, to open up the district, and the lands are being offered to settlers at prices that would astound the people of Southern California.

"One thing which impressed me greatly is the wonderful productivity of the Sacramento valley. Some of this river bottom land, along the Sacramento river, on the road to San Francisco, has been under cultivation for years. The trees are of mature growth, pears and peaches, almonds and walnuts, and the people there seem more than prosperous, they are all wealthy and living in houses that may be classed as mansions.

"The whole piece of 45,000 acres is cut into small holdings of forty acres and less, and these parcels are now on the market. Southern California doubtless will furnish many settlers for this productive land. California needs just such development as this project is. Even though it is nearly 400 miles away, its development will help Southern California business materially."

PRINTERS ADOPT TITLE FOR ASSN.

Advantage of Cooperation Is Stressed by Speaker at Club Dinner

The Franklin Printers' Club of the San Fernando valley was the permanent name adopted by the eighteen representatives of printing concerns in this territory, who gathered at dinner last night in the Egyptian Village cafe, 133 North Brand boulevard, to complete the organization inaugurated Wednesday night, August 1, at a dinner held in the auditorium of the Citizens' building, 150 South Brand boulevard.

Robert F. Adams, of the Superior Printing Company, Glendale, president of the body, prtsided over the meeting; and V. M. Bernard, of Bernard & Son, Glendale, secretary, recorded the minutes. D. C. Coates, of the Lankershim Publishing Company, vice president, who was unable to be present, sent his greetings.

After an excellent meal at the Egyptian Village cafe, served in the Peacock room, under the personal supervision of Robert Jensen, proprietor, an address on "The Advantage of Cooperation" was delivered by Edward Pickering, field secretary of the Franklin Printers' Association of Southern California.

Make Short Talks

Short talks pledging support were made by the following eight new members admitted at last niht's meeting: B. F. Hull of the Sinclair Publishing Company, Burbank; H. E. Bruce of Burbank; Walter Mendenhall and Mr. Keffer of the Van Nuys Publishing Company; William Arnold of the Western Pacific Paper Company, Los Angeles; F. J. Stillman of the Stillman Printing Company; O. F. Riggs of the Intertype Shop; E. R. Frasher of the Oliver Printing Company, the latter three of Glendale.

The name Franklin Printers' Club of the San Fernando Valley was suggested by Harry L. Sinclair, of the Sinclair Publishing company, Burbank, and adopted by unanimous vote.

A committee was appointed, with Jim Chambers of Glendale as chairman, to secure co-operation in job work. The other members of this committee are Fred B. Mattice, of the Oliver Printing company, and D. R. Patterson, manager of the job department of The Glendale Evening News.

A large committee, headed by Harry L. Sinclair, of the Sinclair Publishing company, Burbank, was appointed to bring up samples of jobs to future meetings of the organization.

The meeting adjourned promptly at 10 o'clock to convene again Thursday night, August 23, probably at the Sunset Canyon Country club, Burbank.

Eager to Join

"We now have twenty-eight members of the Franklin Printers' Club of the San Fernando Valley," says V. M. Bernard, secretary of the organization, "and when organization is completed, the total will number thirty-five. In the entire San Fernando valley, there is not a printer who has failed to express his eagerness to join.

"The object of the organization is to effect better conditions in the printing trades, and to encourage and develop a fraternal and intimate acquaintance among those so engaged, thus securing concerted action and co-operation in all matters pertaining to the printing industry as a whole, in the end obtaining for the public higher standards of printing."

Mr. Bernard states that owing to the accident that befell his father, B. S. Bernard, Monday night, August 6, when he broke his right arm while cranking his automobile, an added burden was thrown on him, that made it difficult to give all the members proper notice of last night's meeting.

British Airmen Try New Pilot To Guide Ships

LONDON, Aug. 10.—A new device—virtually an electric pilot—is being tested by British airmen. Great hopes are entertained that it will do away with the fog peril to air pilots.

The device consists of an electric cable which is laid slightly beneath the ground and a set of search coils and an instrument which acts as a steering and height indicator is fixed to the aeroplane.

By this means the pilot is able to locate the track while in the air, and by watching the indications of height he is able to land, although the ground may be invisible.

Arrested as 'Drunk,' Offers Novel Excuse

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 10.—"Your honor, 'twas gas, not booze," declared Patrick F. Dowd of 13 Mason street, in district court, in defense to a charge of drunkenness.

"I just had a tooth extracted," Dowd explained, "and when I walked out of the dentist's everything was hazy. Maybe I created a disturbance, as the officer says, but I don't remember."

When asked who the dentist was Dowd declared he did not know, but said he was on Main street and had a big sign in front of his office. His case was continued.

He looked forward to the time when the American citizen abroad could count upon the support of his government the same as Roman citizens of old.

SAILORS SUFFER TROPIC TERRORS

Two Fishermen at Mercy of Elements for 65 Hours In Drifting Boat

By IRENE CORBALLY KUHN
For International News Service

HONOLULU, Aug. 10.—Half mad and echoing in its every word the stark terror of the open sea was the story told here by Manuel De Mello Pereira and John Piazai, Portuguese fishermen, on their return to port after sixty-five hours at sea in a small, open boat, with a quart bottle of water and a half loaf of bread as their sole provisions.

The return of the two men—one in a delirious condition and each so severely sunburned and hunger and thirst-stricken as to make their recovery doubtful for a time—ended a search which had extended throughout the waters of the Hawaiian group.

Pereira and Piazai left their homes in Honolulu on a Saturday morning, telling their families that they would return that afternoon. They took a small boat and started fishing near Quarantine Island, at the entrance to Honolulu harbor. They fished for several hours, when they noticed that the boat was drifting farther and farther out from shore. Pereira attempted to row back inside the reef, but a strong wind carried the small boat farther from shore, and by daylight on Sunday morning they were out of sight of land.

Wind Opposed Them

"The wind was so strong I had no chance to bring the boat back to shore," Pereira said through lips that were parched and swollen. "Every time I pulled on the oars we drifted farther from land. Sunday morning, I think it was, I tried hard to make shore, but it was no use. The sun was so hot, and we only had the one bottle of water. We had a loaf of bread, but it was hard to eat it, because our throats were so dry—and the sun was so terrible.

"All day Sunday we drifted. Many times the waves almost upset our boat, and I thought the end had come. I saw a ship, a big ship, Sunday some time; but they didn't see us. I waved my arms, and Piazai cried for help, but it was no use.

"Our water was soon gone, although we tried to drink only a little drop at a time. That night we saw many fishing sampans, but none of them saw us. I tried to paddle close to them, but the wind kept the boat going farther away. Sunday night we were close to the island of Kauai, and then the wind shifted and carried us in the other direction.

"Piazai got crazy and kept yelling all the time. It was terrible—no water, and I thought maybe the boat would tip over. One time I thought maybe it would be better for me to jump overboard. There were many sharks in the water, but it would be better to have a shark kill me than to stay another day in that boat. And then the following day we drifted and drifted, and the next morning we made out Diamond Head, at the approach to Honolulu harbor. Then I started to row hard, and finally we got inside the harbor."

Pereira managed to bring the boat within ten feet of one of the piers in the harbor before he collapsed completely. When rescuers reached the boat they found both him and Piazai in a semi-conscious stupor, but physicians revived them and say that both will recover.

Judge Sentences Bad Boys to Year's Play

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 10.—A sentence to play, under official supervision—for one year at a city playground was the "punishment" applied to two boys, aged 13 and 14 years respectively, by a county judge when the youths were brought before him on a charge of using obscene language and being otherwise disorderly. The boys also must report to the judge regularly each evening at 7:15 o'clock.

Uses Magic To Take Bank Roll; Goes To Prison

GARY, Ind., Aug. 10.—The days when witches were burned at the stake were recalled when Katie Kawoiski, Gary secress, was sentenced to from one to fourteen years in the Indiana women's prison for practicing her black magic. Mrs. Kawolski was charged with using her mysterious arts to increase her own bankroll at the expense of the bankroll of a client, Anna Brocka, and was found guilty of larceny. According to the charges, Mrs Kawolski promised to increase Mrs Brocka's savings of $400 to $800 by use of magic. She directed Mrs. Brocka to put part of the savings in a bottle and part in a handkerchief and go to sleep. When Mrs. Brocka awoke she found the $400 had magically disappeared instead of being magically multiplied.

PRINCESS WOULD ADOPT AMERICAN

Advertises in N. Y. Paper for Applicant Able to Bear Title's Expense

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—It's come to the point where European titles are not only going begging, but it is even necessary to advertise for takers.

In the personal columns of a New York newspaper recently there appeared the following:

"Princess, advanced in years, with no heirs, desires to perpetuate title and will legally adopt American, conferring thereby inalienable title; one of the principal European kingdoms; title absolutely authentic, dating back to eighth century; person adopted must possess culture and refinement, be of unquestioned reputation and means commensurate with highest social position."

Edward Kellogg Baird, attorney for the princess, refused to divulge her name, saying he feared his client would be deluged with applications and that her health would not stand the strain.

He disavowed any intent on her part to barter a title for American dollars, but indicated that the successful applicant must have sufficient capital to finance himself in the fashion becoming one bearing a title.

ACTORS OPERATE SARAH'S THEATRE

Famous Showhouse Formerly Under Control of Late Bernhardt

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Administration of the Sarah Bernhardt Theatre, nominally under the direction of the great tragedienne during the last twenty-four years, has passed since her death into the hands of a group of ten actors and actresses.

The theatre, situated on the Place Chatelet, received its present name on January 21, 1899, when the "Divine Sarah" participated in the inauguration.

Originally the theatre was built in 1862 as the Lyric. Destroyed by fire in 1871, it was rebuilt as the Historic Theatre. Before assuming its present name it was known successively as the Theatre of the Nations, Italian Theatre and the Theatre of Paris.

The Opera-Comique Company played there in 1887, after the destruction of the old Opera-Comique and before the construction of their present theatre.

Peace is always a one-sided affair.

GLENDALE JOINS IN LAST TRIBUTE

Final Honors Paid to Late President by Loyal People of City

Glendale joined today in the final tribute of a sorrowing nation for its dead president.

At the hour today when the body of Warren G. Harding was entombed in the shaded quiet of a grassy slope in the cemetery of his home town—Marion, Ohio—the routine activity of a great nation was suspended and the peoples of the north, south, east and west stood in a solemn reverence for their fallen leader.

A firing squad at the corner of Brand boulevard and Broadway sounded the burial hour for Glendalians, and special services in the city's churches and patriotic gathering places were expressions of the city's part in the nation's sorrow.

Ever since the receipt of the news of the sudden passing of President Harding last Thursday night in San Francisco, the clouds of sorrow have hung heavily over cities and towns of the United States, and in Glendale the memorial tributes have been many.

Crepe-Hung Pictures

Crepe-draped pictures of the late president held prominent places in business houses and places of meeting, informal memorial services have been held by religious, civic and club organizations.

Today, the day of the funeral and burial in Marion, many of the Glendale business houses have been closed all day, while others suspended business during the hour of the eastern service.

The city offices were closed all day, all activity was suspended at the Chamber of Commerce and the postoffice was closed during the funeral hour.

Special services were held in the morning at the St. Mark's Episcopal church and the Christian Science church, and an early evening memorial service will be held tonight at the Seventh-day Adventist church.

Poetic Tribute

Glendale's tribute to Warren G. Harding has been beautifully expressed in the following poem written by Antoinette Mandis of 209 North Verdugo road:

LIFE

A share of work,
A share of play,
A happiness, a sorrow,
We live today—
And pass along
Into the unknown tomorrow.

Nation Mourns With Her

Alone, today, with the dagger of poignant grief piercing her heart, Mrs. Florence Kling Harding is bearing her latest cross with admirable fortitude. Perhaps it is the consoling thought that she has the sympathy of 110,000,000 in her bereavement that enables her to bear up under her grief with the same determination which led her beloved husband to sacrifice himself on the altar of duty. Those who have known the widow and her late husband since their marriage thirty years ago, and even the late president himself, always awarded her the lion's share of the credit for raising him from the obscurity of a country editor to one of the world's leaders. Her love and devotion so evident in the dark and struggling period following their marriage, continued to the end. Now in her sorrow the heart of the entire country goes out to her.

BRITAIN HOLDS SOLEMN SERVICE

Thousands at Ceremony in Honor of Harding; King Is Represented

By DAVID M. CHURCH
For International News Service

LONDON, Aug. 10.—In contrast with the simple funeral services at Marion today Britain paid homage to the memory of President Harding with all the impressiveness which would ordinarily have marked the burial of a monarch. In addition to memorial ceremonies in Westminster Abbey an overflow service was held in St. Margaret's church.

Early in the morning a long line began forming in front of the Abbey. Its varied make-up symbolized the late president's love of all humanity. Rich American tourists rubbed shoulders with the most humble London citizens.

Throughout the city the American flag was shown at half mast.

The honors shown the memory of the late president were unprecedented. It was at the express desire of King George that Westminster Abbey was used for the memorial service, this being the first time that such an honor was shown a dead American executive. Tolling bells at noon marked the beginning of the service. At least 6,000 persons attended the service. Many of the women, overcome by emotion, sobbed.

In Deep Mourning

The women folk accompanying the foreign diplomats were all attired in deepest mourning.

King George was represented by the Duke of York. The Duchess was unable to attend.

J. P. Morgan, who is on vacation in Scotland, and Bernard Baruch, financial adviser of the Americans at the Paris Peace Conference were among the Americans in Westminster Abbey. The solemn mourning black was relieved by the brilliant uniforms of high army, navy and air service officers.

All the members of the United States consulate were present, as well as representatives of all the American organizations in England. The late president's favorite hymns were sung, the congregation joining the singing of "Abide With Me" and "Lead, Kindlyq Light."

Canon Carnegie, who was assisted by the Rev. L. E. Nixon, lauded the growing friendship between England and America.

Cabinet Present

Virtually all members of the cabinet were present, including Stanley Baldwin, Foreign Secretary Lord Curzon and Lord Denby. Others present were Sir Auckland Geddes and Former Premier David Lloyd George.

Canon Carnegie, in eulogizing President Harding, said:

"God has seen fit to call President Harding from his work here to a greater task elsewhere. It is fitting that the great peoples connected by strong ties of fellowship should stand by his grave today in spirit if not in fact. Meanwhile we British and Americans at this shrine express our solemn regret over the departure of this departed statesman..

"President Harding was a mighty statesman at the head of one of the world's greatest nations. He served in his work in accordance with God's purpose. He was a sincere worker for the world's good. I am sure all are satisfied with the results he achieved."

Swearing Broadcaster Sought by Radio Fans

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 10.—Radio fans of this city are having their sport seriously interfered with by a powerful sending station estimated to be 300 miles distant that has a loud mouthed sender who frequently sends out "blue streaks" of curses that would do credit to a sailor's parrot.

Few wireless stations in the country have radio direction finders, and the direction from which the radio disturbances emanate cannot be determined here. County Attorney Vernon Seeburger, when asked for an opinion as to the prosecution of the offender, declared the first thing to do would be to discover his identity, but would not hazard an opinion on what grounds the disturber could be prosecuted.

RALEIGH'S BRIAR CLAIMED BY TWO

Two Rivals Declare Famous Explorer's Pipe Is in Their Possession

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Where is Sir Walter Raleigh's pipe? And who owns it? That is a question engaging the attention of lovers of the briar here and, incidentally, is causing much controversy.

For some years Messrs Dunhill, known among pipe connoisseurs the world over, have claimed that the famous pipe is owned by them. But their claim is now disputed by one R. T. Spencer, of Bristol, who maintains that the pipe is really in his possession.

In support of this claim he puts forward interesting data in which he says that the pipe was presented early in the last century to his grandfather, then a young man, by an old soldier, who had had the pipe in his possession for some time.

He describes the pipe in detail and illustrates its authenticity by describing the face at the base of the bowl, which is of the "Red Indian" type known as used on the first pipes, and still bears traces of artificial coloring.

There the matter rests for the moment. But the Dunhills assert that they do not intend to have their historic heritage go by default so easily.

Silk Manufacturer Inspects Philippines

MANILA, Aug. 10.—W. Cheney, representing Cheney Brothers, a large American silk manufacturing concern of Connecticut, was in Manila recently looking into the possibilities of silk culture on a large scale in the Philippines. Climatic conditions are said to be ideal for silk culture, and, according to Dr. Charles S. Banks, former chief entomologist of the Philippine Bureau of Science, Philippine silk worms produce eight generations a year as against only two generations produced by the Japanese or Chinese worms. A silk farm on the island of Luzon, near Manila, recently established is doing well.

IMPROVEMENT OF STREET HELD UP

Council Withholds Action on Western Avenue Paving For Further Data

Action upon the temporary improvement of Western avenue was laid upon the table last night by the City Council. G. H. Randall of 1146 Western avenue, who requested the improvement at the last meeting, was not present last night. Therefore, it was decided to delay action until he could be communicated with and the desires learned of the interested property owners.

City Engineer Ben F. Dupuy's report on the subject was as follows:

Surface Is Thin

"I have examined Western avenue from San Fernando road to Tenth street and find that the pavement on this street consists of a surface of oil which is very thin and has been worked up into ridges by the traffic.

"I will have the new roller go out and re-roll the street and repair the intersection of San Fernando road and the crossing of the Pacific Electric tracks at Fourth street. I do not believe that the roller will make the street much smoother than it is now.

"There are two ways of refinishing the street: first, to thoroughly plow up the present surface and cultivate about one-half gallon of oil to the square yard into it followed by another half-gallon of oil with a coat of screenings. The other would be to place about one inch of rock over the present surface rolling it in and finishing with about one gallon of oil to the square yard and scrennings.

Heavy Pavement Needed

"I believe that either of these would be equally good but it would cost about the same as the original improvement which was four and three-quarter cents per square foot and would not be a great deal better than what was put in originally. I know of no way that the city can maintain a pavement as thin as this is, as, when the surface is broken, the pavement is gone. The people will have to expect to put in a three or five inch macadam paving in the very near future."

Three Legs on Chicken Worry Civil Engineer

A CHICKEN with three legs! If three guests should indicate a preference for the second joint, when George N. Adams of 335 El Bonito street was carving, it would cause this obliging host no embarrassment, "as he raises 'em that way." A month-old chicken sports a third pedal extremity, although it navigates with the usual number.

Mr. Adams is a civil engineer, but when he "surveys" this freak of nature he is inclined to forego the subdivision business and go into chicken raising, as anyone who can make three legs grow where only two grew before is a benefactor to mankind.

D. J. Smith and Wife Leave on Auto Trip

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Smith of 1421 North Columbus avenue, members of the city hall family, left today on an automobile vacation trip to the Feather River country. They will go via Chico, up the Sacramento valley to Chester. A few months before coming to Southern California Mr. Smith was connected for two years with the Stone and Webster Construction Company which was building a hydro-electric plant for the Great Western Power Company. The return trip will be made via San Francisco and the coast route.

Former Subdivider Is Back for Visit Here

Senator Leslie E. Francis of Des Moines, Iowa, returned yesterday afternoon to re-visit Glendale. Until last spring he was associated with H. E. Barnum and M. Walters in the promotion of Sparr Heights, when he was called east because of business interests. He is undecided as to whether or not it will be possible for him to remain here permanently.

It is a fair assumption that where a strong man leads the weak will follow.

LODGE OFFICIAL WILL VISIT HOME

Mrs. Schwitters Plans Treat For I. O. O. F. Orphans In Institution

Happy anticipation of a visit to the Independent Order Odd Fellows' orphans' home at Gilroy is voiced in a letter received this morning at The Glendale Evening News office from Mrs. Loretta Schwitters of 525 North Adams street, past noble grand of the Carnation Rebekah lodge, who is enjoying a vacation outing in the north.

Mr. and Mrs. Schwitters and a group of Los Angeles friends left two weeks ago for a motor and camping trip north and, according to Mrs. Schwitters, they have been having a delightful vacation. She wrote from camp twenty-two miles above Bishop, at an elevation of 11,000 feet. From there they planned to go on to Lake Tahoe.

In writing of visiting the Gilroy home Mrs. Schwitters says, "On the way back we are going to stop at Gilroy and visit the I. O. O. F. Orphans' home. My, but I can hardly wait. I'll surely be happy to be among the children for whom we in Glendale are planning so many good things. Our party, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Olmstead and Mr. and Mrs. Southard of San Diego, and Mr. Schwitters and I are planning to treat the kiddies to ice cream and candy."

Chamber of Commerce, in Message to Mrs. Harding, Expresses Sorrow

The board of directors of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, at their regular meeting Tuesday noon, decided in accordance with Governor Richardson's proclamation to close the Chamber of Commerce rooms all day today, Friday, August 10, out of respect for the late president, Warren G. Harding, who is being buried in Marion, Ohio, this afternoon, while the nation mourns in unison with his widow, family, friends and associates.

The directors decided at their meeting to draft a telegram and dispatch it to Mrs. Harding, and to follow it up with a set of resolutions, expressing the sympathy of the organization and its members.

Send Telegram

Secretary Eugene F. Sanders, C. D. Lusby and Earle C. Pendroy were appointed as a committee to draw up the resolutions. They have not yet completed a draft of the same, but the telegram, copy of which follows, has been dispatched:

"Mrs. Warren G. Harding,
"Marion, Ohio,

"The citizens of Glendale through our local Chamber of Commerce extend to you our deepest sympathies and heartfelt devotion in this hour of our national calamity. You have lost a kind and loving husband and in this loss we share your sorrow. The nation has lost a strong and valiant leader which loss we as a part of this great commonwealth feel most keenly. We bow our heads in deepest sorrow and share with you the grief and trials of this sad day.

In addition to expert training and equipment for solving every beauty problem in the Marinello way, Mrs. Moss has added a feature to her shop, in securing Miss Effie McCormick, formerly instructor of the National School of Cosmeticians, to handle the permanent waving.

Mrs. Moss' message to Glendale maids and matrons is, "No longer need the most distinguished women of Glendale undergo the inconvenience of searching for unrushed, painstaking, permanent waving service."

Rev. M. O. Frost of LaMesa will occupy the pulpit Sunday morning at the Congregationsl church. Rev. and Mrs. C. M. Calderwood are now enjoying a vacation in a cabin in Ice House Canyon. The following Sunday Rev. Charles H. Davis, pastor of the Highland Congregational church will officiate.

W. B. Kirk Writes About Hospitality Of Norwegian Home And Scenic Wonders

THE hospitality of a Norwegian home is described in the letter just received from W. B. Kirk, Glendalian, who, with Mrs. Kirk and their daughter is now journeying abroad.

W. B. Kirk

Mr. Kirk writes from Trondhjem, Norway:

"July 14—The first person I met on our steamer when we were leaving New York was a young man from Los Angeles, named Goustod, with his bride of two weeks, also from Los Angeles, was coming to Norway to visit his parents.

"They were both born here, but have lived in the United States long enough to be real Americans, and proved to be splendid traveling companions. They gave us such an urgent invitation to visit them at the home of Mr. Goustod's father, where we will be for some time, that we decided to accept, so we phoned them from Christiania on Wednesday, and when we left the train in Trondhjem they were waiting for us on the platform.

"How glad we all were to be together again! We visited the celebrated Trondhjem cathedral and afterward taxied out to Laerfoss Falls, a few miles southwest of the city.

"The cathedral was started in 1188, was burned or destroyed, for the most part, and rebuilt in 1513, although it is still unfinished, and it will be several years before it is finally completed. I cannot take time to describe it; you can read about it.

Second to Niagara

"The falls are second only to Niagara, especially just now as the season is very backward. The quantity of water flowing over the precipice is the largest in the history of the country, so they say. We were allowed to reach a platform of masonry directly over the falls. My, how fascinating! The boiling, swirling, roaring water made such a grand spectacle that one was chained to the spot. The spray and mist rose in a gigantic cloud. They produce some electricity from it, but it would seem that they could produce a million horsepower.

"However, the water sometimes gets very low. A story is told of a man in a boat, a few years ago, who lost an oar and was swept over, and of whom never a trace was found, either of man or boat.

"We went out to the Goustod homestead on a small neighborhood steamer, which makes daily trips to Trondhjem through an offshoot of the large Trondhjem Fjord. We went about ten miles and were met at the landing by the strangest looking conveyances you ever saw. There were two-wheel carts, each drawn by a large horse with the harness peculiar to Norway, having a large piece of metal extending above and over the horse's back where the saddle of the backband usually is "The wife and daughter were loaded into the front seat of one of them and I got into the back seat beside the driver, who always manipulated the lines from there. Our friends were in a following one and we started up the hill. Thus we had a four-mile ride, the road bordering a fir-clad ridge of hills on one side, with fertile fields on the other.

Cordial Reception

"Our reception was as cordial as could possibly be expected considering that the mother and brothers couldn't speak a word to us, although the old father had been to America and could understand a little. To be unable to converse, under such circumstances, is indeed pathetic.

"The homesteads of these Norwegian farmers consist of five or six buildings in the form of a hollow square. The two barns are joined into an 'L,' being very large and substantial, and occupy two sides of the square.

"I can't take time to describe the interiors, but one thing was strange—that is the stairway leading to the upper floor in the dwellings is as steep as a ladder straight up. If they hadn't had a ground floor room in the other house for the wife I don't know what she would have done.

"The old-fashioned furniture and the good, strange cooking certainly gave us a unique experience.

Sleep Sitting Up

"All these Scandinavian peoples seem to like to sleep sitting up, judging from the fact that they place a detached piece of mattress under the regular mattress at the head, and on top of this place a large, very heavy pillow as large as two or three of ours; and, not satisfied with this, they have another small pillow on top. The first thing I do is to dig out the mattress pillow and 'ditch' it and the big one, using only the small one.

"In the barns I was shown the skis and sleighs for winter use. The latter have the driver's seat in the rear, same as the wagons.

"Friday the young people and I took a hike up into the hills. The weather had been perfect until that day, when clouds made the air chill and damp. The hay fields and woods were full of wild flowers of every hue, most beautiful ones. I would give a good deal if I could present you an adequate picture of these woods. Firs and pines were the trees, with deep mosses at their roots, high grass and undergrowth filled with flowers bedecked the ground, and the most wonderful ferns abounded on every bank.

"Springs and little brooks gurgled along, sheep and wild-eyed cattle gazed at us in surprise, and glimpses of the Fjord came to us occasionally through the trees. The daughter nearly had fits over it and the old man wasn't far behind. We had always longed for a vision of fjords, landscapes, vegetation and home-life in Norway, and we were having it to the full.

Gather Flowers

"We gathered wild lilies-of-the-valley, pansies, forget-me-nots and the pretty flowering 'carre' (caraway seed) which is used in rye bread. It abounds everywhere, as does red or sweet clover. We are pressing a few of all these to show you, if we can preserve them.

"Most regretfully we took our departure Saturday afternoon for the beginning of our journey through the fjords. We are at our farthest point north, so don't forget that we are having about twenty hours of real daylight each day. It upsets our usual program, because the people rise late and retire late. We cannot get any lunch (except beer or wine) at the hotels until after 2 o'clock, and the evening meal starts at 7 and is continued till midnight. If we reach a place at 9:30 in the evening they expect that we will eat after we get there, and that doesn't suit our manner of life. We retire at 12 midnight, without lights.

"Molde, Norway, July 16.—We are on our way. The Bennett Tourist agency headquarters in Christiania have been established in Norway since 1850 and so have that business pretty well corraled. We have avoided a fixed itinerary so far, but their experience and transportation - hotel connections are so fine in this section that we had one of their best men arrange our trip for us there, and we think it includes nearly every point of scenic value which is accessible.

They Vary Greatly

"Contrary to the ideals I had always had, that the fjords were all narrow inlets of the sea between precipitous cliffs, they vary greatly, some being just such as I had thought and others wide and bordered by scenery of a varied character.

"So the trip we are already taking started with a rail trip and will consist of alternating auto, steamer, cart and possibly sleigh journeys, and will wind up with a steamer trip from Bergen to Newcastle, England, landing us there the 29th. It is most fascinating.

"As best I can, friends, I will try to take you with us in imagination, just as nearly as possible. Even a genius couldn't do justice to such portions of God's handiwork, but, as it seems to be my privilege to see it, I shall endeavor to give you some faint pictures of it."

Word pictures of their continued trip will be printed in an early edition of The Glendale Evening News.

EMERSON SCHOOL STAGES PROGRAM

Entertainment by Students Is Warmly Praised by Large Audience

Faculty members of the Emerson School of Self-Expression have received many compliments on the program presented by pupils Tuesday night at the Congregational church.

All of the program numbers are reported as most interesting and deserving of praise. The first part of the program was a short play by the children. Following was a group given entirely by adult students.

Decorations for the second part of the program were of pepper and acacia branches and dahlias. The decorating committee included Mrs. Page, Mrs. Loyd, Mrs. Rutler and Miss Helen Page.

Yesterday afternoon the expression students entertained the music students at the studio. At this time the three prizes for excellence were awarded in each department, the winners having been selected in part by the votes of the audience at the recital Tuesday night, and partly by a record of individual work kept by the school faculty.

In expression the first prize was won by Adele Loyd; second, Beth Morrish; third, Martha Warfield.

In music, first, Gurdon Wattles; second, Dorothy Kennedy; third, Robert Fisher.

Their second stop will be at Abilene, Kansas, where Rev. Cole at one time was pastor of the Christian church.

The annual International convention of the Disciples of Christ will be attended September 2 to 9 in Colorado Springs, Colorado. The California convention of the Disciples of Christ, which met from July 30 to August 5, in Long Beach, appointed Rev. Cole to represent it on the committee of recommendations at the international convention.

Departure will be made over the Union Pacific. The return trip will be made over the Denver & Rio Grande and Western Pacific to San Francisco.

The pulpit of the Central Christian church will be occupied during Rev. Cole's absence by Rev. Arthur N. Ritchie, pastor of the First Christian church of Sacramento, August 19; Rev. Willard N. Learned of 1549 Glenwood road, who is leaving September 1 for the African Mission field, August 26; and Dean Arthur Braden of the California School of Christianity, September 2.

ADD LAUNDRY TO BUNGALOW COURT

Modern Features Form Part Of New Structure Now Being Erected

A community laundry with all necessary labor-saving equipment is being planned for the bungalow court being erected at 824 South Glendale avenue, and it is believed that it will be the first of these courts to be so equipped.

Contractor Malcom Smith of Los Angeles started work upon this structure last week for Mrs. L. D. Brown of 825 Mariposa avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bliven of 914 East Acacia avenue. He expects to have it completed in about sixty days.

The property has a frontage of seventy-six feet on the east side of Glendale avenue. The depth of the court will be about 160 feet.

The court will consist of fifteen three-room units, each of which will be as large as the ordinary four-room flat. The front and rear will be two stories in height and will contain three apartments on the second floor and two apartments on the first floor, divided by an arched entrance to the courtyard. This will be flanked on either side by a one-story building containing three apartments and surmounted by a roof garden. On one side to the rear will be a storeroom and on the other side the laundry.

The six garages will be entered through the thirty-foot alley in the rear.

Architecture will be of the Spanish type and the exterior probably will be stucco. The front will be ornamented by imitation roofs of red tile.

Mrs. Ella Richardson To Visit Daughter

Mrs. Ella Richardson of 317 North Brand boulevard, and her little grandson Fergie Mitchell, left Tuesday for King City, where Mrs. Richardson will be a guest at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Shives Mitchell. About the middle of August Mrs. Richardson's son John, who has been spending the summer in Glendale, will go north to join her. They will then go on north for a visit and John will leave for Virginia to enter his second year at the University of Virginia.

Mrs. Wyckoff and Niece Make Visit in East

Mrs. Clifford Wyckoff of 209 South Everett street, accompanied by her niece spent an enjoyable 8 weeks visiting with relatives and friends in the east. Mrs. Wyckoff spent most of the time visiting in her former home, Des Moines, Ia., and en route home spent a week at Clear Lake with relatives and also visited in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Bagg expect to make Glendale their permanent home. Mr. Bagg has been visiting for the past several weeks, with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ryan of 332 West Acacia avenue.

FRYING PAN

Shaped like a saucepan, an asbestos lined frying pan has been invented that is said to save fuel and retain odors better than a utensil of the usual shape.

One-half the world's supply of diamonds is owned in the United States.

Members Of Rotary Club To Gather At Brookside Park For Annual Picnic

TWO announcements featured the routine work of the Glendale Rotary Club at its luncheon yesterday noon. Of immediate importance to the members is the fact that they will gather their families together and go picnicking at Brookside park, Pasadena, on the afternoon of Wednesday, August 22. Fay G. Stone, Val M. Hollister, J. E. Phillips, C. H. Kirkman and George E. Bentley are members of the jinks committee which promises to provide coffee, cream, sugar and ice cream. The members will pack their own lunches, Dave Crofton declaring informally that he has a few select shoe boxes for the occasion.

The other announcement was to the effect that J. Arthur Myers, a singer of note, who has recently arrived from the East, is arranging to organize a community chorus of 500 voices. More regarding this effort will be published from time to time.

Visits Rotary Clubs

George U. Moyse, principal of Glendale Union High school, who has been away from the club for five weeks on a vacation tour, told of various cities where he had attended meetings, speaking particularly of the Sebastopol, Cal., club, which was celebrating the opening of a $12,000 Chamber of Commerce building.

W. E. Hewitt, another traveling member, told of his experiences en route to Vancouver, also noting the fact that the one sore point with our British brethern is that so many of the natives of the Dominion are coming to the States

H. S. Webb, genial department store owner, created a near riot when he introduced A. Fish as his particular guest. It was a tuna, weighing 136 pounds, caught by Mr. Webb after a twenty-two-minute struggle three miles out of Avalon, Catalina island.

Holds Championship

Richardson D. White requested the guest be removed at the earliest possible moment, it being entirely too fishy to please his aesthetic taste. J. Herbert Smith also questioned the veracity of Mr. Webb's fish story, but the evidence was conclusive and "Hal" holds the record as champion fisherman of the Glendale Rotary club, as well as worthy of distinction in the Tuna club.

C. C. Cooper introduced E. U. Emery as his guest, and visiting Rotarians were introduced as follows by President George B. Karr:

Leonard H. Collins and Jake Swall of Burbank; Will R. Forker and Sam H. Harris of Los Angeles: E. C. Lyon of Oakland; H. W. Lewis of Jerome, Ariz.; Ralph Loring of Lewiston, Idaho, and Art Johnson of Monrovia.

KIWANIAN CLUB POSTPONES MEET

Club, in Mourning for Late President, Calls Off Today's Luncheon

Mourning for Late President Warren G. Harding will prevent the regular meeting today in the Tuesday Afternoon Clubhouse of the Glendale Kiwanis Club.

Secretary Don H. Webb of 600 East Broadway has sent out the following communication on the subject.

"In accordance with the proclamation issued by President Coolidge and also one by Governor Richardson of our own state, setting aside Friday, August 10, as a day of mourning in honor of our late President, Warren G. Harding, it has been decided to observe this day as Kiwanians, as much as possible. Therefore, we will not have our regular luncheon Friday.

"Almost every Kiwanian will, no doubt, close his place of business at some period during the day, out of respect for President Harding, and we feel, that we as Kiwanians, that the least we can do is to omit our regular Friday meeting on his funeral day.

"Be prepared to attend the luncheon on the following Friday, as we will have a program well worth hearing."

Into the Concience Fund

TODAY'S SHORT STORY, BY Ad Schuster

"I have a notion," remarked Blueberry Dodds to Wasco Will, the sky, and the world in general, "to develop a sure-fire, upright and dividend-producing conscience."

"Yes," grunted the other, "you have notions, don't you?"

"Don't you ever read the papers? Maybe you never heard about the old party who sends a letter to the street-car company inclosing a nickel and a lot of anguish along with an explanation of how once he slipped by a conductor and has never been at peace with his conscience. What does the old guy get? Does he get blame for living riotously on the interest of that nickel all those years? Nope, he is patted on the back and called honest."

Wasco, who was sprawled on the ground, moved a dangling leg from the other knee and sat up.

"Are you going to start in confessing to all the free rides you have taken from the railroad?"

"When I confess it won't be a cheap nickel one. I'll count up my ready cash and throw it all in one lump into the conscience fund. You'll see, it will come back double or more."

"And all your cash?"

"Is 87 cents."

The two moved into Minden and with each step the plan grew in the mind of Blueberry Dodds.

"You wait outside. I'll try this old duffer."

Into a store the tall tramp walked. There was a strangely mild and unctuous expression on his face as he sought the proprietor and his voice was gentle as he spoke.

"You are Mr. Whipple?"

The man whose name was painted in large letters above his door, nodded in surprise at the knowledge of the stranger.

"You do not know me, and it is no wonder. I am William Green. In the old days I was Willie Green, a carefree boy intent on play when I should be working. It was in this store, sir, that my peace of mind was robbed, that I came face to face with the realties. Willie Green walked in here one afternoon yearning for a baseball glove and no other trouble in the world. He walked out with a glove under his coat and has carried the guilty knowledge since. Here, sir, is 87 cents. It is all I have, but I can say, sir, for the first time in years, that my conscience is free and I am an honest man. Bless you, my dear sir, bless you."

Blueberry walked slowly toward the door and turned, expectant.

"You say," said the merchant, "this is your last cent?"

"I start in anew," the repentant one replied. "Start in at the bottom. Charity I will take, or a loan, but from now on every cent will be honest."

"I remember you now," the merchant was smiling. "Who would forget little Willie Green? And I remember that glove. It was worth $2.25. Do you see that pile of boxes? Carry them to the basement and split them for me or else your conscience will be $1.38 shy."

It was a challenge to the pose and the part. Besides this, Mr. Whipple held all of Blueberry's capital.

"I will do as you say," he agreed, and all afternoon he chopped wood and wondered if the story and the labor would soften the heart of the storekeeper. "He ought to pay me good for this. I have a way of splitting wood that is a bit better than most."

When he had finished, Whipple thanked the tramp.

"I won't offer you money," he said. "I understand the feelings of a man who is trying to set himself right. Your reward is peace of mind. Goodbye, Mr. —er, Green."

As he walked down the street Blueberry had nothing to say to Wasco. Could it be the old man had doubted the story? Did he think he remembered every kid who had entered the store? "I acted the part perfectly," he told himself, "and yet, I wonder if he didn't see the game?"

"I asked a feller," Wasco offered this irrelevantly, "how long this man Whipple had been in business in this town and the feller said just three months. Say, what kind of a business is it paying a guy 87 cents for the fun of chopping his wood?"

Blueberry's reply was made with the toe of his boot and while the other was dusting himself off, "Hereafter," he said, "I'm done with conscience as a money-making proposition."

WOMAN HELPS IN ELECTIONS

'Colonel House' Of Gov. Smith's Candidacy

Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, who takes a prominent part in Governor Smith's political affairs

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—If Governor Alfred E. Smith is elected president of these United States in 1924, it will be largely due to the work of a motherly, domestic looking lady, Mrs. Henry Moskowitz by name. She has been called the "Colonel House" of Smith's administration.

Who is Mrs. Moskowitz? is the question asked by many; and how does she come to have so much influence with Governor Smith?

Their First Meeting

The first meeting between the two was in the campaign of 1918, when Mr. Smith was a candidate for governor of New York against ex-Governor Whitman. Justice Proskauer, who was the judge's law partner, urged that Mrs. Moskowitz be selected to organize the women voters for Smith. Her appointment as chairman of the women's division of the citizens' committee for Smith followed. Mrs. Moskowitz invited him to speak before the Women's University club. Smith was inclined to think this was somewhat of a "highbrow" organization and, while accepting the invitation, indicated that his remarks would be perfunctory. Mrs. Moskowitz advised that he make a real address to see how it took. Her advice was taken and the result was that the club women announced their intion of voting for him. Mrs. Moskowitz's advice had been decidedly sound.

As the campaign progressed Smith relied more and more on the judgment of his new lieutenant. Her knowledge of the intricacies of organization and insight into problems with which women do not ordinarily concern themselves, was amazing. After his election the governor asked Mrs. Moskowitz to help him call together the elements favorable to his program for "social justice," and from this conference came the governor's many bills to alleviate the condition of the workers.

Aid in Re-election

Since that time Mrs. Moskowitz has been his strategist, never daunted during the darkest hours of his political campaignings, and she it was who sensed the issues to be stressed which resulted in the governor's second election by the largest plurality ever given a candidate for the state office in New York.

Years of devoted and unselfish work for the social betterment of her city, state and nation, bringing her into contact with the social life and governmental administrations, have fitted Mrs. Moskowitz for the niche she now occupies. She has spent her whole life in New York, and with her husband, Dr. Henry Moskowitz, is a potent factor in social uplift work.

MOLES AND WARTS

Personally, I seldom consider moles disfiguring, even when they appear on the face, neck or arms. But even if you disagree with me, I strongly urge you never to attempt to remove or tamper with these blemishes yourself. If you consider them too unsightly for toleration, I urge that you consult a physician—for the reason that birthmarks, moles or scars, if irritated, can so easily start a cancerous growth.

If you consult a reliable skin specialist he will be able to remove the blemish quickly and easily, if it is not dangerous. Or he will warn you in time for a cure if the growth should be cancerous, or have a tendency that way.

Warts are much less dangerous, but neither should they be tampered with to too great an extent. In some cases a little olive or castor oil applied every night will dissolve them. Turpentine rubbed into a wart every day for three days often cures; or sometimes moistening the wart and rubbing it with salt will cause it to disappear within a week's time.

A well-known paste for warts is made by mixing half an ounce of sublimed sulphur and one of glycerine with two drachms of acetic acid. This paste is to be used only on the wart, though it is harmless if it touches the surrounding flesh.

Here also is an odd formula from an eighteenth century book: Take black birch leaves and the inside bark that grows next the wood, one ounce of each. Bruise, boil in half a pint of wine (it will have to be the homemade kind these days) and a pint of spring or rain water, until you have a strong liquid. Strain and apply warm to the warts. This is also supposed to make smallpox and chickenpox marks less noticeable.

But again I repeat my caution—it is best to always consult a physician, no matter what the blemish.

Mrs. Charles S. W.: The shampoo that you are using on your little girl's scalp is much too drying. Only a scalp that secretes a great deal of oil could recover from the severity of such a treatment. The night before you shampoo her head massage into the scalp a good oil (it may be olive, castor or crude oil); the next day shampoo with castile soap. This oil treatment should cure the tendency to dandruff and help her build up a healthy condition of the scalp.

You can rid yourself of these troubles.

V. G. W.: I will be glad to mail you the henna formula upon receipt of a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Anna: I do not know what the preparation contains.

Side Talks

AN INVESTMENT IN PEACE

I chanced to share a seat in the trolley the other day with a woman with whom I have a bowing and trolley car acquaintance. We chatted of the weather and other casual topics as one does under such circumstances, and then as the trolley passed a very attractive looking house with some beautiful shrubbery around it she leaned forward and said, "We lived in that house until we came to your town."

Since she has moved to our town she lives in a much smaller and less attractive house than the one she pointed out, and my instant reaction was:

"What a pretty house! Didn't you hate to give it up?"

Less Luxury, More Peace

"Yes and no," she answered. "I hated to sell it, but I have been happier since than I ever was there. It was a lovely house but it was more than we could afford to carry. We hung onto it because we liked it so much and because we were proud of it, but since we made up our minds to let it go we have been ever so much happier. It was a struggle all the time to live up to that house and pay its bills. We haven't as nice a house now, but we have more peace of mind and more financial leeway and we really are happier. I only wish we had done it years ago."

Wasn't that an interesting bit of insight into a human experience?

And a very common experience, too.

The Blessed Relief

At least the first part is very common. The second is not quite so common. There are probably a dozen people who know what it means to support a house and struggle to live up to it, to one who knows the relief of giving up some of the comfort and luxury and impressiveness and getting, in exchange, greater peace of mind.

It is very easy—especially in these days when any house at all costs what a fine house did twenty years ago—to justify oneself in investing more than one really ought to in a home. It is very hard to face the fact that so surely as one does so, one is letting oneself in for expenses that will prove a burden and crowd the joy out of life.

A Slave to Your Own Comfort

Slavery to your own comfort and convenience and ostentation is still slavery, and, though the rewards may be pleasant, the burdens are just as heavy.

A house can often become the master and arbiter of a family's destiny if it makes other considerations secondary to the necessity of living in it.

Of course, if you had to choose, it is better to be house poor than auto poor. But why choose any master. Isn't it better to be your own master rather than the slave of any luxury.

Every woman appreciates pretty bags. Often a dainty bag gives just the right finishing touch to a costume. I have been making a study of the bags which women are carrying, and here are the results:

A Tapestry Bag for Shopping: This style of bag is made oblong in shape and has no heading at the top. Small tortoise-shell rings are sewed along the top edge, and through these rings a silk cord drawstring is run. If you wish to use the bag only for carrying your coin snap-purse, handkerchief, and one or two very small parcels, then make it about seven inches long and five inches wide. Otherwise make it much larger. Any remnant of good tapestry may be used for it, provided it has a small pattern. Dark-colored silk poplin makes a good lining.

A Black Moire Silk Bag: This is the prettiest kind of handbag to carry with a black or dark blue costume. It has a "dressy" look. Buy a metal snap-top for it (one which has a chain handle), then buy black moire ribbon the right width to attach to this top. Also buy lavender satin ribbon for the bag-lining; this lavender ribbon should be the same width as the black moire, for it is put back-to-back with the moire. A bag of this sort is generally about six inches long and the two lower corners are turned in so as to make a rounded bottom. A black silk tassel is suspended from the exact center of the bottom.

The New Envelope-Shaped Bead Bags: This kind of small card-case or handkerchief bag is growing in popularity. It is about four inches in width and three inches in length, with a pointed flap—exactly like an envelope. The tip of the flap is caught to the bag-front by a pearl button on the bag and a black silk loop on the tip of the flap. It is made entirely of beads, with a bead-chain handle stretching from one side of the top to the other side of the top.

The lining is black silk. These flat little bags will carry a small snap coin-purse (the kind made of leather, of envelope shape) and are very handy to carry for church use or when making a social call. Cut-steel and black beads used together in a pepper-and-salt effect (that is, alternately in every row of beads put on the bag) make the most effective envelope bag.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters, M.D.

Author of Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories

Milk—No. VI

One of the tests that is used in the Health Department to determine the cleanliness of milk is the bacteriological counting. Rosenau states that the number of bacteria in milk is the best single index we have of its general sanitary character. Exclusive numbers indicate that the milk is dirty or old.

Certified milk should not contain more than 10,000 bacteria per centimeter. (A centimeter is about ¼ of a teaspoonful.) Grade A not over 200,000 before and not over 10,000 after pasteurization. Market milk not over 500,000. New York has placed the limit at 1,000,000 to a cubic centimeter. For the market milk, Boston has a standard of 500,000 and Rochester 100,000.

You will perhaps wonder how we determine the number of bacteria in milk. This is the way it is done.

The samples are collected in a very carefully sterilized bottle. The milk is diluted with sterile water in proportions of one to ten, to one to a million. For certified milk one to one hundred dilution is used. The bottom of a round glass dish (called a petri dish) is covered with a gelatine or agar solution which will support the growth of bacteria. A cubic centimeter of the dilution is poured on this media.

This now is put into an incubator for 48 hours. The germs which were in the diluted milk, scattered over the nutrient material, begin at once to multiply. In 48 hours there are billions of them, as you know from the little mathematical problem we did a while ago. There are so many that crowds can be seen with the naked eye, and it is now known as a colony.

One colony represents one of the original germs. (The little spots of mould you have seen on foods are colonies consisting of billions of mould bacteria.) Now these colonies are counted, and from the number of them we know the number of germs that were in the dilution used.

When we know how many were in the dilution, we can compute how many were in the original one-fourth teaspoonful of milk. For instance: If there are ten colonies, and the dilution was one to one hundred, then in the original there would be 100 times 10, or 10,000.

DISEASES SPREAD BY MILK—Sometimes instead of the ordinary germs from dust and other contaminations, the milk may have disease producing germs in it.

The disease germs that have geen known to grow in milk are the germs of tuberculosis, typhoid or para-typhoid, diphtheria, scarlet fever, septic sore throat, malta fever, foor-and-mouth disease, and dysentery. Milk borne epidemics are not rare. In Boston from 1907 to 1911, there were five outbreaks directly traced to infected milk, causing a total of over 4000 cases of sickness including diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid fever and septic sore throat.

Milk becomes infected from human sources—at the farm or dairy, in transportation, and at the household. Milk may be also infected from the cows themselves especially with tuberculosis. Tuberculosis in cows is not at all uncommon, and it is estimated that from 5 to 7 per cent of human tuberculosis is of bovine (cow) origin. A very much larger per cent than this of tuberculosis in children is caused by the bovine tuberculosis. It usually takes the form of gladular or bone tuberculosis in them. Many thousands of children suffer from this form and many die from it.

Tuberculosis will be eradicated from cows when the "accredited herd" plan is made universal. Under this plan, the federal and state authorities co-operate with the dairymen, slaughter all cows that have tuberculosis and reimburse the owner for them. The Accredited Herd certificates had been issued to 23,000 herds in April of 1923.

I do not want to frighten you about milk, mothers, only to the extent that it will make you be careful of your milk supply. If you cannot get certified milk and are not absolutely sure of the purity of the milk you do obtain, see that the milk you do get is pasteurized or boiled. Either of these processes will destroy the disease germs—although it will not make poor or dirty milk good nor clean of course.

Shrewd Lawyer Turns Tables On Gas Co.

MUSCATINE, Iowa, Aug. 10.—For almost five years Herbert G. Thompson, local attorney here, has not paid a gas bill, although he has been receiving gas service all that time.

How does he do it? "Easy," Thompson answers. "Just employ the same tactics the gas company does."

In 1918 the gas company boosted the price of its service. The attorney declined to pay the new rate and the company threatened to have his meter removed. He obtained an injunction restraining the company from interfering with gas service and offered them the "contract rate" for the gas he obtained. When the company refused to accept payment of the lower rate Judge D. V. Jackson retained the case on the court calendar at Thompson's request. So the attorney hasn't paid any bills yet.

EAGLE ROCK

WATER AND FIRE PROBLEMS ACUTE

Hydrants Obsolete, Mains Are Wrongly Laid Out, Is Expert's Criticism

All Eagle Rock fire hydrants are obsolete and should be taken up and replaced, is the recommendation of the Los Angeles Fire department to the Board of Public Works.

Last week Captain Bryden came out from central office and looked over the Eagle Rock district with Lieutenant E. W. Welty. Their observation was that mains and laterals are improperly laid out and joined. Their conclusion was that all present hydrants should be replaced with new, and more added.

Their investigation showed that the district is now getting almost double the water obtainable before annexation, and at considerable less expense.

Approximately 1000 gallons of water per minute are being drawn from the Garvanza reservoir, according to F. C. Eckert, superintendent of the Eagle Rock Water department, while some 600 gallons per minute are being drawn from the local reservoirs.

Plenty in Reserve

As it is cheaper to use Los Angeles water, Eagle Rock pumps are kept shut down as much as possible. There is, however, Mr. Eckert states, a sufficient reserve of water available, from various sources, to meet almost any emergency.

Ultimately, nevertheless, the Fire Department feels, a sixteen-inch main connecting Eagle Rock with the Los Angeles aqueduct will be the only solution to the local water problem, should the district grow as it appears likely to do.

One thing is certain, feel those who have made a study of the situation—and that is, the insurance rate for this district will be high until the present fire hazard is completely and permanently removed.

Early in the week, Assistant Chief McDowell, of the Los Angeles Fire department, visited Eagle Rock Engine No. 42, bringing with him an architect, the idea being to get a line on the necessary additions to the living quarters necessary there.

The proposal is to give Eagle Rock approximately the same type of fire protection as Hollywood and other suburbs. In order to do this, Engine No. 42 will require a full-sized, triple combination company, with a substitute company, meaning a personnel of fourteen men each; and should a truck company be added, a little later, another fourteen men will be required.

Room for 50 Firemen

It is therefore obvious to those who know the present situation and are planning for the future, that Eagle Rock, if she is to enjoy adequate fire protection, must arrange to provide quarters for approximately fifty firemen, and the apparatus that goes with such a personnel.

In order to house such a fire-fighting organization, it is proposed to extend the City Hall rear out into an L, making it a two-story structure, corresponding in exterior architectural appearance with the balance of the beautiful little building, of which Eagle Rock is justly proud.

Social and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis from South Dakota are making their home with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Wood of 118 Eddy avenue. The Jarvis family came overland by automobile.

Miss Gladys McKenna, a teacher in the Berkeley schools, is visiting with Mrs. C. H. Hammon, 135 Mt. Helena avenue.

Mrs. H. I. Cruzan, of 429 Montiflora avenue is planning to spend a week with her mother in Berkeley.

The new A. J. Braasch home, corner of Hill and Windermere avenues, will be open to the public Saturday and Sunday afternoons, August 11 and 12, from 2 until 6 o'clock, under the auspices of the Women's Twentieth Century clubhouse.

AT BIG BEAR

Mr. and Mrs. William Hunter of 107 East Lomita avenue and two sons, Donald and William, are spending the week at Big Bear.

People Pay Final Tribute Memorial To Mrs. Harding International Politicians America Needs Stand Alone

By Gil A. Cowan

FLOWERS covering the grave of Warren G. Harding today in Marion, Ohio, are symbolic of the eternal rest to which the beloved and departed president has gone, while a nation assuages its grief in reverent cessation from daily duties.

President Harding was taken in death from the United States at a time when conditions could not have been more favorable for the sudden transition of power, and a tranquil country has accepted its burden of sadness in reverential spirit.

The will of the Almighty has been done and with bowed heads the last mourners today kneel at the grave of a great man to pay him final tribute—a man among men, a president of the people, a departed friend of all, who has passed from mortal pale into the hereafter, glorified by death in the service of his country.

The Glendale Chamber of Commerce is having prepared a beautiful memorial to Mrs. Harding. It would not seem fitting to give the wording of the text at this time, yet it is only right to remark that the action on the part of the local civic organization is one deserving of utmost commendation.

The widow of the late president, this Lady of Sorrows, is the one to whom sympathy at this hour should be extended. Her cup of sorrow is filled to overflowing and may the many tributes and memorials serve to alleviate the pain found in the passing of the Death Angel through the first home in the land.

Tonight this lone woman, without kith or kin, other than her dead husband's relatives, returns to Washington, her high position swept aside, her home to be established elsewhere. Surely she will need the sustenance to be found in the milk of human kindness as she surveys the travail in the valley of the shadow.

Changes in the cabinet that seem quite probable at this early hour of the Coolidge administration should be for the better, it being definitely settled that Harry Daugherty will resign as attorney-general. That will meet with popular approval, no doubt, particularly among former service men and fruit raisers.

Secretary Edwin Denby of the Navy, Secretary Andrew M. Mellon of the treasury, and Secretary Herbert Hoover of Commerce, are among the others who undoubtedly will go.

Practically all of these men may be advantageously replaced, although their work has been above the criticism attached to the attorney-general's office. Presidential booms for Hoover and Hughes should automatically remove them from the cabinet, the internationalism of both endangering the safety of a Republican domestic administration.

It would appear that the grand old Republican party is composed of two classes—those who were convinced by the Democratic propaganda of Woodrow Wilson that this nation should become entangled in international affairs after a century of freedom from old world affairs; and the other class which thinks for itself when it says "America for itself."

We love America too well to see our diplomats, our navy, our army or our Washington government vassals of foreign domination. We love America too well to see the youth of this nation fighting the Bolsheviki or the Mohammedans. And we love California that much that Britain, France and Italy will never say to us: "You must give the Golden State over to Orientals for cultivation and development."

The person wishing to debate the case will say that a World Court or a League of Nations or another international group would never dare say as much. And we point to Fiume, Smyrna and other places smitten by the brain children of mere men around the treaty table of Versailles.

Also, we insist that the whole weight of the world would not stop the banditry of China or Mexico if conditions were such as to warrant otherwise peaceable people in resorting to such distressful means of accomplishing their aims.

Neither can we obliterate the Mohammedans or Buddhists or Bolsheviki. We cannot turn black to white, yet there are those people who would restore the prewar governments for the dirty dollars there are in it. Others would trade with the soviet because of Russia's gold.

America should stand aloof. It should be a beacon light for the world. But it should make other nationalities come to the shrine of democracy, rather than to send its great men to Paris or Lausanne or The Hague.

The one outstanding feature of President Harding's career was the disarmament conference. It was effective and as time goes on we believe there is opportunity for the United States to call in the plenipotentiaries of the other great nations to consider other major moves toward peace on earth.

So we ask to know if these international politicians have the heart of America as their first consideration, or is it only the itching of the palm on the part of the official representatives of those who shall profit by some sudden shift in foreign finance?

WARREN HARDING BACK TO OHIO

Soil That Gives Him to Nation Takes Him Back For Its Own

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 10.—A city of crepe today silently acclaims her greatest citizen. All Marion mourns that stalwart son she so lately sent forth proudly to Washington—as Warren G. Harding, at the head of a sorrowing cavalcade that has come 4000 miles to bring this great man back to the little town, is borne solemnly up Center street.

Of all those weary miles that have occupied the last never-to-be-forgotten week, each with its particular sorrow, none was so poignant as the last, that long mile of crepe-hidden flags and bareheaded, tearful throngs gathered along the avenue leading from the Union station to 498 East Center street, the home of Dr. George T. Harding, Sr., father of Warren G. Harding.

Old Frinds There

All his old friends were at the station to meet the late president's train, as it pulled in at 12:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Jim Prendergast and Hoke Donithen were there, as was Dick Crissinger, whom he had elevated from a country bank to the governorship of the Federal Reserve board. They were there and scores of others whom he had known for forty years, and who had known him as "W. G." in the old days when they were building Marion.

Thousands of others were there, too, standing patiently in the hot sun for hours, while the train that was bringing home his body puffed slowly through the last fifty miles of the long journey, between a continuous lane of people. But the father of the late president was not there. He was home, bowed in grief, awaiting that dread gift of fate—a dead son.

There was no music, no flare, no sudden burst of emotion, when at last the long, black train drew into the little station. Instead, reverential hands lifted the flower-decked casket from the car, "Superb," and bore it tenderly, lovingly, to the waiting hearse. Then, amid an almost dead silence, broken only by the soft purr of motors, the hearse slid into Center street between rows of saddened friends.

Lady of Sorrows

Behind the hearse rode the nation's Lady of Sorrows, Mrs. Harding, the blinds of her limousine partly drawn, garbed in black, her face invisible because of the great, dark veil that framed her bowed head. Still in magnificent control of her broken nerves, she sat there heroically, while tears sprang from a thousand eyes as she passed.

Behind the widow rode other members of the family, including Dr. George T. Harding, Jr., brother of the late president. His car was followed by the cars of cabinet members and close friends of the man whose life was cut short in the service of his country.

The fact that the funeral train was three hours late made little difference to the assembled thousands who lined Center street. They had come to pay final tribute to the great man who had returned to his home town thus tragically.

Final Home-Coming

Only a year ago he was here before, they thought, as they stood waiting, and happy memories of that time raced through their minds. Then it was truly a joyous home-coming, a period of feasting and celebration, the town gaily decorated in his honor. Now it was a grim, final home-coming, a period of sorrow and lamentation, the town draped sadly in honor of Warren G. Harding, who will nevermore leave Marion.

Yesterday afternoon his body lay in simple state, in his father's home, where friends and neighbors came and looked down a last time on the pallid face and still form of their great friend.

Shortly before noon today the special train bearing President Calvin Coolidge and other high government officials arrived, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the funeral cortege formed at the Harding residence and proceeded to the Marion cemetery.

Given Back to Ohio

There, at 3 o'clock, this afternoon, after brief and simple funeral servicees, the body of Warren G. Harding, twenty-ninth president of the United States, who died in San Francisco, Cal., at 7:20 o'clock Thursday night, August 2, 1923, aged 58 years, was given back unto the soil of Ohio, which gave him to the nation November 2, 1865.

Through it all, to the very end, Mrs. Harding bore like a stoic the immense strain that has been hers now for more than a week. Yesterday Warren G. Harding belonged to the nation, and to the myriad thousands and scores and hundreds of thousands of grief-stricken citizens in forty-eight states, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaiian islands, Philippines, Porto Pico, Guam, Samoa, Panama Canal zone, Virgin islands, wherever in the world the Stars and Stripes flew, and at half-mast, bowed in tribute to the passing of the great chief of this mighty nation of which they are part.

Yesterday Warren G. Harding belonged to the nation—but today he belongs only to one woman, saddened and bereaved beyond all telling, who has retraced with head bent low the trail so joyously taken nine years ago, when, with her husband, she first set out for Washington as the wife of a United States senator, destined to become president.

Today Warren G. Harding belongs to his broken-hearted widow—but tomorrow, and forevermore, he will belong again to Ohio, which gave him, and takes him back, with the simple eloquence of earth.

Side by side until the end of time the body of the late President Warren G. Harding will rest with that of his mother, Mrs. Phoebe Dickerson Harding, in the shade of two giant elms that seem to stand silent guard over the Harding plot in beautiful Marion cemetery at Marion, Ohio. Not far from the burial place of the Hardings is the plot of the family of Harding's widow. A tall shaft, erected to the memory of Mrs. Harding's father, Amos H. Kling, marks the Kling lot.

The late president's lot is in the rear shaded by two giant elms whose trunks can be seen.

The late President Harding's last resting place is beside that of his mother, Mrs. Phoebe Dickerson Harding, almost in the center of Marion's beautiful little cemetery. Already the plot contains the bodies of two members of the Harding family, holding also that of his sister, Mary Clarissa.

FINAL TRIBUTE BY HOME TOWN

All Marion Does Honor to 'W. G.' at Services as Nation Mourns

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 10.—Done with the pageantries of pomp and power; done with the trials and perplexities of high office; done with the worries of a swift moving world, Warren G. Harding, twenty-ninth president of the United States, tarried awhile in the little house of his father today receiving the affectionate farewell of friends and neighbors, before going on to permanent rest in the shady little cemetery be helped to build.

And, while he rested again today in the flower-filled room, heavy with the fragrance of blossoms from all the world, a great nation over which he so lately presided, stopped its business and joined with this little home town of his in a mutuality of respect and sorrow. The wheels of gratuity stopped today, commerce ceased its hustling grind; the government itself halted—for it came to Marion and clear across the continent over which he traveled but a few days ago there welled the respect and reverence that a free people accord their honored dead.

Form Line of Sorrow

The light rain that started falling with the break of a misty dawn in Marion did not deter the friends and neighbors of a lifetime of forming in a long, sad line in front of the little house in Center Street this morning. Sombre skies but reflected the spirits of those who had known Warren Harding for a lifetime, and so they formed in that silent procession and filed past his bier with no thought but to pay the last full measure of devotion that is the rightful heritage of a great and good man.

There was no caste, no rank, no favorites, in that long line which extended from the big maple tree in front of his father's house clear down Center street to the now empty office, six blocks away, where, in other happier years, Warren G. Harding used to sit at his desk making a newspaper and helping make a town.

They filed sorrowfully past his bier today as they came, the high black hat with the battered straw, the luster of silk with the faded calico. The man in the casket with his lips slightly parted in a smile would have liked that. He was constantly preaching for the abolition of class and class consciousness in America. Today there was only one class filing past his flag-draped bier—a class of sorrowful, reverential and tearful people.

Tribute From Employes

Only once in the hours of the forenoon did the soldiers hold up the line for a favored company. That was when those of the Marion Star who had worked with and for Warren Harding in the days when he was a struggling publisher, came by. Sixty-one of them there were and scarce a dry eye among them. To them he was more than the president of the United States—to them he was "W. G." and the chief. There were the printers in that line from whom Warren G. Harding used to borrow money to buy white paper. He often told it himself. And theirs was the real sorrow that comes from long association in the daily battle of life. They knew him when——.

For the rest—they were bankers and clerks, mechanics and merchants, laborers and artisans, boys who used to hawk the Marion Star, about the streets under the guidance of the woman who is burying her husband today. Most of the boys are now grown to affluence and polish, but the prosperous years of later life have not dimmed or tarnished the affection they held for "W. G." nor for the woman who toiled by his side.

Widow All Alone

It was for her as much as for him today that their hats came off and their eyes grew moist. She is alone, and battling bravely against a supreme breavement. He is resting from life's labors.

All the forenoon, it was the same sight—a seemingly endless stream of friends and neighbors. It was the same last night. Twenty thousand people had filed mournfully by when the heavy lid of the casket was lowered at midnight. There were apparently just as many more waiting today.

The population of Marion is but 30,000, but the line of mourning people today came from many places. Some of them motored all night from distant points throughout Ohio. Others came on the two score trains that puffed in and out of Marion during the morning. Still others walked and bore the evidence of country roads on their shoes. Few men, none, perhaps, had a wider acquaintance in Ohio than the man who lay in the casket. He had served as a state senator many years before he served the nation. It was a strange, sad day in Marion and a curious one. Since that long-remembered day in Chicago, when word flashed to Marion that one of its citizens had been nominated to the highest place within the gift of the people, Marion has entertained many crowds — but never like this.

Now All Is Still

In other years, it was boisterous, confident crowds that came to Marion with bands and speeches, to find the town astream with flags and bunting undimmed by any funeral or solemn note. They came for speeches, for play, for politics. Today there were no noises, no raillery, and the flags that everywhere flew were at half mast, their brightness dimmed by the heavy black that denotes the dead. There were the same pictures in the windows that were there three years ago, but their frames were of heavy black and beneath the smiling face were the significant numerals "1865-1923."

The hotels were crowded as of old, with high hats and frock coats, but the speeches have sunk to whisperings, and over all there is that silent air of restraint that betokens a funeral.

Soldiers on Guard

The sun that struggled up through a mass of gray, low-hanging clouds in the east, looked upon a strange and saddened Marion. On the lawns about the home of Dr. George T. Harding slept several soldiers. They rolled into their blankets and slept on the grass. It had become, overnight, the bivouac of hundreds of sleeping men, sent to Marion by the state authorities in Columbus to make certain that the thousands who came to Marion today were kept orderly and in their proper place. On the whole, the job of the soldiers was a light one, for in those thousands of visitors today there appeared to be nothing but silent reverence for the man who slept so peacefully in the little room at his father's house.

They obeyed quietly and without questioning the low voiced commands of the sentries who patrolled the streets, directing traffic, bearing messages and carrying on the tremendous amount of detail work incident to the burial of a president of the United States, necessary even though he is being buried as a public citizen.

In this strange atmosphere today, the President of the United States came from Washington to Marion, Ohio—President Coolidge; members of the Senate and House and federal dignitaries of all kinds. Members of the cabinet were already here. They came, grave-faced and sorrowful, on the train that brought the remains and the widow.

Heretofore, Marion had not given much thought to Calvin Coolidge. He was here in 1920, he was seen not infrequently around the famous front porch on Mount Vernon avenue, but the eyes of the Marionites and the visiting thousands at that time were all on the great figure of the man who slept in the casket today.

Now, by the whim of an ever-amazing destiny, he has risen to the heights so lately occupied by Marion's well-loved son. And Marion was interested today but not awed by the coming of the great. In their minds, they recognize that the slim boyish-looking man from Massachusetts is the president, but in their hearts the president of the United States is still their kindly human neighbor, who slept again today in the house of his father. And it will be so until the click of the iron gates in Marion cemetery late this afternoon sends their neighbor away to that long rest from which there is no return.

Harding Aged Rapidly Under Strain Of Duties At Washington

Relentless—a juggernaut crushing everything in its path—is Time. And Warren G. Harding, as Washington knew him from the days he first came there as a United States senator, through the trying reconstruction period and now in death, is a mute example of that relentlessness. In the prime of life, as photos of the time show, he came to sit in the senate. He aged under the ordeal and at the time of his nomination, though the picture of health, he bore traces of Time's handiwork. Then followed the trying and worrying problems of America's foreign relations and domestic difficulties. And Time drew the lines on his face just a little deeper, the only clew to the great strain against which his staunch heart was battling. But Time is relentless and though Harding's great spirit was willing the flesh weakened and Death, Time's ally, won.

As Marion Knew Late President

The late president "making up" in composing room of Marion Star, which he owned until recent months; delivering an address from his front porch at Marion; with Mrs. Harding; and waiting his turn, with Mrs. Harding, to cast vote at last presidential election.

Marion, O., home of the dead president, is proud in its grief—proud that it can cherish the memory of Harding as a home-town idol. The Ohio city watched Harding's rise from printer's devil to president with interest and always took a share of the fame which came to him.

ROTARIANS PAY HARDING HONOR

Solemn Program Rendered At Club Meeting for Late Member

Rotarians of Glendale yesterday held memorial services for the late Rotarian and President of the United States, Warren G. Harding, who was a member of the Marion, Ohio, club and addressed the convention of Rotary International at St. Louis two months ago.

Rev. Ernest E. Ford had charge of that section of the program, the departed member's picture being placed between the American flag and the Rotary emblem at the rear of the speaker's table.

"President Harding has gone," said the Rev. Mr. Ford in eulogy. "We have him all in our hearts and I am going to bring to you from different sources some pertinent things about Warren G. Harding's life and ideals."

Message to Rotary

He then called upon Richardson D. White, superintendent of city schools to read from the Glendale Rotoservice Bulletin the following extracts from the late president's message to Rotary at its convention:

"If I could plant a Rotary club in every community throughout the world I would do it, and then I would guarantee the tranquility and the forward march of the world. If we can get down to service, ample service, honest service, helpful service, and appreciate the things that humanity must do to insure recovery, then there will come out of the great despondency, and discouragement, and distress of the world, a new order; and some day I fancy I shall see the emblems of Rotary in the foreground, because you of Rotary, representative of the best we have in America, have played your big part in making service, one of the appraised offerings of humankind, worth while."

For High Ideals

"In his life at Washington, in his home and in his business he was seeking to carry out the high ideals before us," commented Rev. Ford who asked George B. Karr, president of the local club, to tell of his impressions of the president while addressing the St. Louis convention.

"He appeared as one of us—a great, big, lovable man, a true Rotarian," was Mr. Karr's tribute to the departed chief executive.

W. E. Hewitt, another Rotarian who had the pleasure of meeting the late president in Vancouver, B. C., gave some personal reminiscenses of the occasion, stating Mr. Harding made his best speech of the trip at a banquet in the Canadian city where he told of the friendliness between the States and the Dominion.

Paul Carson, organist of the Glendale Theatre, gave a beautiful rendition of "Nearer, My God, to Thee" on the piano in the Glen Inn banquet room and Rev. Ford closed with a poetic tribute to the fallen chief, words that will long stand in the memory of the club members.

MANILA, Aug. 10.—The Philippines are the only wet territory under the American flag, but, according to local legal authorities, a recent decision of the United States supreme court extends the Eighteenth Amendment to the islands, and steps will have to be taken to enforce the law. The passage in the decision which, it is claimed, makes the islands dry is as follows:

"Various meanings are sought to be attributed to the term 'territory' in the phrase 'the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' We are of the opinion that it means the regional areas—of land and adjacent waters—over which the United States claims and exercises dominion and control as a sovereign power."

Enforcement of prohibition in the islands would mean a big loss to the government revenue, which at present is barely sufficient to meet administrative expenses.

A new record in the annals of successful leprosy treatment was established recently by Dr. Samuel Titze of San Lazaro Hospital, when he discharged two patients as definitely cured after only six months' treatment with ethyl ester, a chaulmoogra oil preparation. Of 302 patients who were placed under treatment on January 1, 1922, forty-two have been paroled pending final discharge and twenty-seven have been definitely declared negative, so far as leprosy is concerned. It usually requires two years for a definite cure. Dr. Tietze injected 204 patients in twenty minutes, beating his previous record of 214 patients in thirty-seven minutes.

Senate President Quezon, Speaker Roxas and other prominent Filipinos have cabled President Harding protesting against the contemplated application of the United States coastwise shipping laws to the Philippines. Under the shipping act the president can extend these laws at his discretion, and he was recently reported as having expressed his intention to do so. It would mean that only American ships should carry cargo between the United States and the islands, and this would materially help the American merchant marine, especially on the Pacific. The Filipinos are apprehensive that extension of the coastwise laws would mean a strengthening of the political ties that bind the islands to the United States.

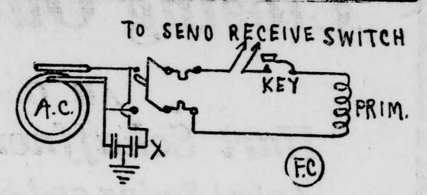
A law affecting prospective mothers employed in local factories is likely to play havoc with the Philippine tobacco industry. Under this law such women are entitled to two months' vacation with pay, one month before birth of the child and one month after the interesting event. As the great majority of tobacco workers are women and the Filipinos very prolific, it is easy to see that the tobacco factories must count on a considerable increase in unproductive overhead expenses. The Philippine tobacco industry has not been any too prosperous recently, and there is a strong feeling of protest against the measure. The author of the law is Senate President Quezon, and he saw to it that it was passed at the last session of the Philippine legislature.

The attorney general, in response to requests from various interests concerned, has placed a strict interpretation on the provisions of the law. Thus, he ruled that in the event women entitled to the birth bounty are discharged, such dismissals must be strictly bona fide and no substitutes can be put in their places. Also, if a worker decides not to return to work after giving birth to a child and receiving the prescribed bounty, she is still entitled to the month's pay and is under no obligation to return. The attorney general has also ruled that the provisions of the law apply to all females, whether married or unmarried.

A Filipino regiment, the 57th U. S. Infantry, stationed at Fort McKinley, has just achieved the distinction of qualifying 100 per cent of its personnel as rifle shots —experts, sharpshooters and marksmen. This is a record for the United States Army, the best previous showing having been made by the 25th U. S. Infantry at Nogales, Ariz., last year with 97 per cent.

RADIO

BY FRANK CHAPMAN



MOTOR generators used for ship work usually consist of a direct current motor driving an alternating current generator or alternator. The generator field winding is connected to the direct current mains of the ship through a "low power" resistance and a variable resistance known as the field rheostat. The value of potential delivered by the alternator is dependent on the values of resistance in the rheostat and low power resistance. The more resistance in these the lower will be the voltage generated. To increase the voltage this resistance is cut out, allowing more current to flow through the generator field windings, thereby strengthening the number of lines of force being cut by the armature. For low power, all the resistance is cut in and the lower power switch (which usually short circuits the low power resistance) pulled out. This is used where very short distances are to be worked and interference reduced to a minimum.

In practice, when the motor generator is running and it is necessary to make adjustments to the set, the generator field switch should be opened so that there will be no current delivered by it from which you might get a shock.

As the power of a generator depends on the product of its volts and amperes, the power may be varied by means of the generator field rheostat. The power may also be controlled to some extent by the speed of the armature, but where a constant frequency is desired it will be necessary to maintain a constant speed.

As one cycle is produced by the armature passing two adjacent field poles, the number of cycles per second depends on the number of revolutions per second and on the number of field poles.

The frequency of a machine having a revolving armature is calculated as follows:

$$F \text{ equals } \frac{N \times S}{2} \text{ where:}$$

F equals frequency in cycles per second, N equals number of field poles, S equals revolutions per second.

In the case of a standard marine set the frequency is 1000 alternations or 500 cycles, 30 field poles and the speed 2000 revolutions per minute or 33 1-3 per second. Using the formula it gives us:

$$F \text{ equals } \frac{N \times S}{2 \times 1000} \text{ equals } \frac{30 \times 33\ 1\text{-}3}{2}$$ equals —— equals 500 cycles.

Where two of the factors are known the third can be figured out.

There are two principal things to be varied in a motor generator. The frequency of the generator is varied by means of the motor field rheostat and the voltage of the generator by the generator field rheostat.

A field rheostat, while much larger, works on the principle of the ordinary filament rheostat. The more resistance you cut out the more current flows through the circuit. One form of this rheostat is resistance wire wrapped on a rectangular piece of slate with a slider arranged to make contact with the turns similar to a slider rod on a turning coil.

Motor generators used for radio work are protected from high frequency voltages that flow in radio circuits. The insulation of the windings of the motor generator are not designed to carry current of high voltage and frequency. These stray currents always take the shortest path to ground and in so doing may puncture the windings of the armature in trying to get to the ground via the shaft and base of the motor or generator. One way of protecting this wiring is to install all the connections in metal conduit and then ground it. Another is to connect two one-half microfarad condensers in series, connecting the two outer ends to the line to be protected and the center one is grounded. This device is shown at X. It will allow the high frequency high voltage currents to flow through it to earth but will not allow the low voltage low frequency currents to get through. Another device known as a protective resistance rod is connected across the line and the middle of the rod grounded. This answers the same purpose, as the condensers, due to high resistance, will not allow the low voltage currents to pass through but offers little resistance to the high voltages used in radio.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

— BY HOWARD R. GARIS —

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE JAY'S ACORN

"Hay! Hay! Hay!" called a shrill voice one morning outside the hollow stump bungalow of Uncle Wiggily Longears.

"Who is that calling 'hay'? asked Nurse Jane. "Tell them we don't want any hay, nor straw either, if you please, Uncle Wiggily."

"That isn't a peddler selling hay," laughed the bunny.

"Who is it, then?" Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy wanted to know.

"I think it is a Blue Jay bird," was the bunny's answer, and, surely enough, it was one of those bright blue birds making the noise. It can not be said that the song of a Jay is pretty music. Still it has its uses, I dare say.

"Hello, Mr. Jay!" called Uncle Wiggily. "Were you calling me?"

"I was," answered the Jay perching on Uncle Wiggily's roof, and, with his head on one side, looking down at the bunny. "Do you want an adventure, Mr. Longears?" inquired the Jay. "Hay! Hay! Hay!" he shrieked, bobbing up and down with his wings fluttering as he made this noise.

"Why, yes, I'd like an adventure," the rabbit answered.

"Then come to the woods with me," invited the Jay. "Under a tree where I have my nest is something very queer, all curled up in a round ball. Perhaps it is a football belonging to one of the animal boys."

"I'll come and see what it is," decided Uncle Wiggily. "As you say, it may be an adventure."

So the rabbit gentleman hopped through the woods, while the Jay flitted from tree to tree. All of a sudden the Jay swooped down and, in his beak, picked up something from the ground, flying back to a tree branch with it.

"What did you pick up?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Blub-glub-gurr-zee-gik," mumbled the Jay.

"I can't understand a word you say," spoke Uncle Wiggily.

"Plop!" The Jay dropped something from his bill, letting it fall with a rattle on the dried leaves that covered the ground.

"I picked up an old dried acorn," the bird said. "I couldn't talk any plainer with the acorn in my bill. I had to drop it to tell you about it."

"Oh, I am so sorry I gave you that trouble," Uncle Wiggily said. "But, really, I didn't know what you meant by "glub-blub" and so on.

"It's perfectly all right," laughed the Jay. "I can pick up the acorn again." Down it swooped after the brown nut from the oak tree. And when the Jay had the acorn in his open bill once more, Uncle Wiggily asked:

"Are you going to eat it?"

"Blub! Glub! Zick! Shee!" mumbled the bird.

"Dear me," said Uncle Wiggily. "I can't—"

"Plop!" Down fell the acorn again as the bird dropped it to say:

"I am taking this acorn home to my little birds. It isn't really any good to eat, but they like to hear me drop it, ploppity-plop, on the dried leaves. Now I'll pick it up again," which he did.

"I'll try not to ask you any more questions while you are carrying the acorn in your bill," said Uncle Wiggily, with a low and polite bow of his pink, twinkling nose.

"Blub! Glub!' murmured the Jay, as he flew on with the acorn. Soon he reached his nest tree. Uncle Wiggily looked around and asked:

"Where is the queer adventure thing?"

"Blub! Blub! Zerg; Zoop!" mumbled the Jay.

"I can't quite make out what you say," began the bunny.

"Plop," down fell the acorn again.

"Oh, let me carry one!"

"Dear me!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily, and just then the cuddled up object at the foot of the Jay's tree uncurled, and there was the Woozie Wolf!

"Well may you say 'dear me!' " howled the Wolf. "For I am going to nibble your ears, Uncle Wiggily!"

"No, you aren't!" cried the Jay. With that the bird swooped down and picked up the hard, round, brown acorn. "Plop!" the Jay threw the acorn at the Wolf. It hit the bad chap on his eye.

"Wowchie! Scowshie!" howled the Wolf. "It's hailing stones! I must run away!" And away he ran, nibbling no ears that day.

"Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!" shrieked the Jay. Then he picked up the acorn again and let it drop on the dried leaves for the little Jays, making it sound like a baby's rattle box.

"You were very good to me," spoke the bunny. "You gave me an adventure and saved my ears." And if the tennis ball doesn't try to jump rope with the salt shaker, and make the pepper sneeze, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the two little pigs.

BILLY WHISKERS

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

When the first darky Billy and Nannie had frightened saw that his chum had deserted him he picked up courage enough to try to follow him, but Billy with a bound gave him such a butt that it sent him clear up the steps and out on the sidewalk, where he fell right in front of a policeman who was patrolling the block.

The policeman was about to club the frightened darky when he was surprised to see two big goats come up out of the cellar. He tried to stop the first one, but was butted over on top of the darky, and the second goat stepped on them both as it ran after its mate down the street.

"What were you fellows doing down in that cellar at this time of night?" asked the policeman, recovering himself.

"Just trying to tie the goats up, mister, so they couldn't escape. And now you see both have escaped," said the one darky.

And the policeman took his word for it and marched off down his beat.

Billy and Nannie ran down the street until they came to a large yard in which were lovely big trees and many shrubs, and, seeing the gate open, they walked in and lay down under one of the trees to rest and sleep until daylight.

At the peep of dawn Billy and Nannie awoke and the first thing to greet their nostrils was the delicious perfume of tea roses and carnation pinks.

"Oh, Billy, do catch that lovely scent of the roses! I haven't smelt any as fragrant as those since we left the old farm in New England. No one seems to raise the old-fashioned tea roses any more. And I just love them! To eat them with the dew on them is like dining on ambrosia."

"Ambrosia? Pray, what may that be?" asked Billy.

"Don't you know? It is the food the gods were supposed to live on."

"I never knew that before. But, instead of talking and dreaming of how you used to love them, come and take a taste now."

And the two goats went over to the rose bed, and, if you will believe me, they ate every rose and every bud on every bush in the whole bed, and there were two hundred at least. But when Billy got started he could not stop, they tasted so deliciously sweet and fresh with the dew upon them.

"I always thought young head lettuce was the best thing to eat in the world, but hereafter give me roses and rosebuds," Billy said.

"I do hope whoever owns these roses won't feel too badly about our eating them," said Nannie. "But, anyway, no one could have enjoyed them more than we have."

Could Nannie only have seen and heard Mrs. Hargrave rave and tear her hair when she found her roses had been eaten, she would have felt like apologizing. But it was well that Billy and Nannie did not stay around there, for the gardener would surely have broken their backs with his rake had he caught them.

(Tomorrow you will see what a revengeful nature Billy had.)

Timely Views of World Topics

"WOMEN IN POLITICS SHOULD STICK TO OLD PARTIES," SAYS MRS. SABIN

"Women interested in politics are learning more and more the advantages of working through the already established organizations. The parties are here already. Certainly working through them much more can be accomplished than by standing aside from them and fighting them." This is the view of Mrs. Charles Sabin, New York woman named to the woman's advisory committee by the national Republican committee. "After all a congressman is elected by a party. If a delegation comes to him representing a party he knows about, he naturally knows what to do and how to receive their petitions much better than if a group calls to see him representing some group or party or interest he has never known anything about.

MRS. C. H. SABIN

"The whole weight of political tradition is behind established parties; certainly the practical means of accomplishing ends is by taking advantage of existing machinery, at least while we are educating ourselves politically, instead of trying to scrap what we find before we have anything adequate to put in its place.

"In my own experience it has been intimated to me again and again by men that they fully expected women to do sudden, rash, illogical things, that women could not be depended on. There are several reasons for that attitude, I suppose—we have had the vote such a little while; we are ignorant for the most part of 'the game' and the rules of playing, and we are inexperienced. But those are all things which can be overcome with a little care, and as men see us going on seriously trying to find out things and helping within the organizations instead of just going off on tangents as they expect, the situation will right itself.

"The attitude of women has changed greatly since suffrage became an accomplished fact. It is not only welfare measures, and special legislation affecting women, that we are interested in now; it's all legislation to some extent. And that interest is a growing and intelligent one.

"The attitude of assurance, or perhaps I should say, over-confidence, is less and less in evidence among women voters. A saner, graver way of looking at things has come into being—a sense of civic and national responsibility that is quite marked."

IN THE SUMMER

A fool there was, and he went away—
Even as you and I.
His home was a pleasant place to stay—
A dandy place for a holiday—
But the fool was a fool, and he went away—
Even as you and I.
Oh, the wits we've lacked, and the grips we've packed
In summertime and fall.
And the time when, having had our fling,
We've come home gravely wondering
Just why we went at all!
A fool there was, and his savings spent—
Even as you and I.
The roof of a pullman for his tent,
And lived the life of an emigrant,
But a fool will follow his natural bent—
Even as you and I.
Oh, the fools we meet, and the dust we eat,
And the tendency to roam;
The hardships that we all abhor,
And the rest that we are looking for
Awaiting us at home!

SUNSHINE PELLETS
BY DR. W. F. THOMSON

The parson prayed,
The doctor dosed;
The doctor lost
The parson's ghost.

The water in small swimming pools and the air in small rooms are soon polluted.

When you are coughing and losing your weight, have your sputum examined; don't hesitate.

Take no chances when you marry,
Let the vacuum clean your room;
Listen to we staid old timers,
Do not buy your bride a broom.

There's a sucker born every minute; a quack, every hour; sixty suckers, therefore, make a quack.

We heartily agree that incompetent doctors should not be permitted to practice. Who, though, shall say when a doctor's incompetent? The public is the poorest of all judges.

FUND INCREASED BY BOXING SHOW

Fight Fans Out in Force to Witness Bouts Staged At Elks' Lodge

The Elks' fund for sending the band to the annual state convention at Eureka next month was appreciably increased as a result of the boxing card that was staged last night in the lodge room and which drew a big crowd of fight fans to witness the bouts.

Johnnie Talez and Dick Dixon opened the proceedings, the verdict being awarded to Dixon by Harry McCartney, the referee. Paul Wilkins won from Spike Morgan, Joe Layman and Louis Garcia went four rounds to a draw, as did Frankie Novey and Johnny Martin, and Young Farrell was given the verdict over Billy Harrell, a decision that caused the latter to manifest a spasm of bad temper.

Dan Tobey, the veteran announcer of Vernon and Hollywood, did his stuff during the evening, springing a few funny stories and telling the assembled Elks to be sure and attend the circus that is to be held in the auditorium of the lodge on August 24 and 25.

Smallest Plane Has 3-Horse Power Motor

ROME, Aug. 10.—Authorities have completed experiments with a new type of airplane which is claimed to be the smallest in the world.

The machine has an engine of three horsepower, and reached an altitude of three thousand meters during tests which were witnessed by Premier Musssolini and high Italian personages.

As a result of these tests the "Baby" has been officially adopted by the Air Department and orders for a hundred have been placed.

Little Hen Produces France's Largest Egg

MARSEILLES, France, Aug. 10.—An undersized hen belonging to a chicken fancier at Jourves holds the record for laying the largest egg of any chicken in France. The egg measured three and a half inches long and two inches in diameter.

The germ of procrastination finds a hot-bed in leisure.

Sport Snaps by JACK KEENE

Iron Man Joe McGinnity, now in his fifty-second year, won his fifth straight victory in a month when he shut out Rock Island 2 to 0. The game was played at Dubuque in the record time of one hour and three and one-half minutes. It was the third time he was on the mound when a league speed record was broken.

* * *

Boxing in Australia is beginning to boom again despite the lack of good material, according to Jack Munro, general manager of Stadiums, Ltd. Third-class American boxers are averaging $2000 a fight. Munro writes that he is developing several new stars who will make visiting Americans extend themselves. One is Jack Dale, an 18-year-old lightweight, who has beaten everything in sight. Ted Lewis, who manages Jimmy Wilde, is going to send over a team of boxers from England, but he refused to sign a contract for Wilde. Australia no longer can afford to import men of Wilde's type.

What chance will Luis Firpo have against Jack Dempsey when they meet in September?

Well—

It took Jack Dempsey twelve rounds to knock out Bill Brennan.

And Firpo did it in the same number of rounds.

But—

Now that we've appeased the statistical boys let's lay all joking aside.

The best way to tell whether or not Firpo can lick Dempsey is to count the petals on a daisy. We rather like that daisy thought in connection with either man. One thinks next of the chances the ordinary heavy takes of becoming a daisy pusher when he meets either person.

Dempsey drove Willard into a bloody hulk in one round in Toledo and only superhuman gameness kept Willard in the ring two more rounds.

Willard, four years older and with but one more fight under his belt, took all Firpo had for seven rounds before succumbing in the eighth. So much for brute punching power.

Tommy Gibbons proved that a clever boxer has a better chance with Dempsey than a slugger. Tom went fifteen rounds with the king, three rounds longer than any other man in Dempsey's championship career. Firpo knows nothing about boxing. Swings like a gate. Doesn't know how to set himself to deliver a punch and rarely uses his left hand at all. The primitive man-eating tactics of a gorilla give Firpo the basis for his style.

So far this item doesn't make it look so good for the Bull of the Pampas (we had to ring that phrase in).

But at this point consider this: Dempsey never met anybody of Firpo's type. Dempsey met the biggest man in the ring, the best boxer in the game and a lot of second rate heavies with just a mediocre amount of skill and hitting power.

How Dempsey will handle himself against a wild man whom Willard could not put back on his haunches with all the big Kansan had, cannot be figured.

So, starting picking the petals, Dempsey loses—he loses not—he loses—he loses not—.

Super Lifeboat Will Look Like Cruiser

LONDON, Aug. 10.—England will shortly possess the most powerful motor lifeboat in the world.

Sixty feet long, possessing two ninety horsepower engines and having as many watertight bulkheads as a battleship, the new craft will be practically unsinkable. Her engines, it is thought, will be proof even against the flooding of her engineroom.

THIS STATE BANK, incorporated under the Banking Laws of the State of California, and therefore supervised by the people's representatives in California, is for the service of the people of this community.

Hand in hand with this foundation for confidence shall go a progressively useful and intelligent personal co-operation with its customers. This service will be willingly rendered without regard for the size of its customer's accounts.

To the Business and Commercial interests—we will not only provide this city with convenient banking facilities, but an association with this institution will offer a great variety of advantages, ranging from the saving of precious minutes from the business day to those invaluable benefits which are the fruits of co-operation between a strong financial institution and an up-to-date business firm when a broad-minded conception of mutual helpfulness prevails.

We can but touch briefly on the subject of banking service as it is exemplified by this bank, but it is a fact that a modern progressive institution, dominated by the conviction of its responsibility to its clients, can well provide the center from which must radiate innumerable lines of influence helpful to every individual within its scope. You are neglecting your own interests if you fail to form a connection with such an institution. The opening of this new and strictly home-owned Federal Commercial and Savings Bank gives you an unusual opportunity to establish such an affiliation. Why not avail yourself of it? The sincerity of our desire to serve you will be very apparent when you enter our bank and our pledge of service is made as you receive your special Opening Day Souvenir.

We repeat, "A new outpost will be established in the progressive march of the commercial life of Glendale," and a broad individual co-operation to the end of making the event an historical success will yield honor and interest to participants.

BURBANK

POLICE TO STUDY NEW MOTOR LAW

Provisions of New Statute Will Be Discussed at Officers' Meeting

In view of the fact that September 1, sees the new motor vehicle law go into effect abolishing "speed traps," John H. Long, Burbank chief of police, has been invited by Captain W. F. Cannon of the motor patrol department for Los Angeles county, to attend a meeting to be held in Los Angeles on Thursday, August 16, for the purpose of discussing the new law.

Chief Long has accepted the invitation and will attend the meeting, at which it is believed a program will be mapped out for putting into operation a uniform system under this law, which will, in addition to doing away with traps, demand that speed officers wear uniforms while on duty and in other ways conform to the standards of police work.

The new law will compel motorcycle officers to equip their machines with speedometers and secure their evidence in an open manner, by following behind and checking autos that appear to be exceeding the speed limit.

Uniform Fine System

It is understood that the meeting of August 16 will consider means employed by other cities for meeting the new situation. It is also believed that a uniform system of fines will be adopted, based on the margin of speed in excess of the law.

There is a feeling among speed officers, according to Chief Long, that the new law is unconstitutional and will be taken to higher courts and declared so. But the general public do not share this opinion, looking upon the measure as relief from a system that was becoming intolerable for its pettiness and tyranny, according to advices received from many tourists.

Bashful Bachelors,

That bachelors are bashful has always been a moot question; very moot in fact, and never more so than in Burbank at the present time, where twenty of these young (in spirit at least) gentlemen have banded themselves together into an organization and adopted constitution and by-laws.

The name of the body is the Bachelors' club, and a glimpse at their platform should cause every marriageable lady in the community to rejoice, for they announce:

"To all who may be concerned: This is to certify that we, the members of the Bachelors' club of the city of Burbank, in the county of Los Angeles, in the state of California, U. S. A., do hereby acknowledge that we all love the ladies; that we are not bachelors by choice, but are bound and held by the chains of timid bashfulness, which thus far we have been unable to overcome, but which might be surmounted with a little encouragement from the other side."

Shall Such Things Be,

Here then, is the answer to the moot question, so far as Burbank is concerned—a bald, unashamed admission of bashfulness on the part of twenty young bachelors!

Should such an indignity long be suffered by this fair city, That is the question the ladies are asking, waxing militant withal, their eyes dangerously a-flash. And it would not be surprising if the Bachelors' club of Burbank found it necessary before long to put on a membership drive to fill the depleted ranks, if the threats of these young Carrie Nations are carried out.

Playwright Blackwood Dies in Sanitarium

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—John S. Blackwood, famous throughout the United States as a playwright, newspaperman and theatrical manager, died here yesterday.

With him at the time of his death in a South Pasadena sanitarium was his wife, who, although divorced from Mr. Blackwood seven years ago, went to his bedside when death hovered near. Death, according to his physician, was due to a weakened heart condition which made it impossible for the famous writer of stage plays to withstand the rigors of cardiac asthma.

Bandit Slays Self As Bank Raid Fails

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—Foiled in an attempt to hold up the Bank of San Gabriel, at San Gabriel, yesterday afternoon, an unidentified bandit shot and killed himself as a posse of citizens closed in on his companion and captured him.

Entering the bank, two bandits, brandishing pistols, ordered O. C. Killian, the teller, to hold up his hands. When Killian refused one of the bandits shot him in the shoulder, inflicting a serious wound.

WOODILL & HULSE ELECTRIC CO., INC.
Established 1891
SPECIALTY JOBBERS

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 7, 1923.

Glendale Hardware Co.,
Glendale, Cal.

Gentlemen: We understand that competitive sales organizations are spreading the report in your community that the Gillespie-Eden corporation, of Patterson, N. J., manufacturer of the famous Eden electric washer is closed and bankrupt.

We regret that any competitive salesmen should make such unethical statements, and wish to give you the facts in the case. The Gillespie-Eden Corporation is owned and controlled by the Gillespie interests, of New York, a very powerful Wall Street operator, whose financial rating runs into tens of millions of dollars. The Gillespie interests are very sound at the present time, and there certainly is nothing that would indicate their inability to carry on any desirable operation.

It is true that the Eden factory is closed at the present time, but we find that this is a common practice among eastern manufacturing concerns during the vacation period, inasmuch as it is more economical for such factories to have all employes take their vacations at the same time.

Rumors such as you have been experiencing have been current for the past three years, and to satisfy ourselves and our dealers we obtained, in the spring of this year, from Mr. Gillespie, president of the company, a statement to the effect that all machines bearing the Eden name could be relied upon to carry the standard manufacturer's guarantee for one year, and that service parts for the machine would be guaranteed for the life of the machine.

We trust that with this information you will feel confident to sell the Eden machine, as it has always been sold—a leader in quality and value in the washing machine field.

Very truly yours,
WOODILL & HULSE ELECTRIC CO., Inc.
